FARM BELT DAILIES CLAIM FARM RELIEF IS SOLVING ITSELF

Better Conditions To
Help Republicans Is
Belief

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—The problem of farm relief is being solved by agriculture itself and the assurance of relief will prove a boon to Republican campaign prospects, the bimonthly report of the corn belt farm dailies said today.

The farmers' problem, the report said, is being solved by the "barn-lot" allies of the farmer, the steer, the sheep and the lamb. For these products, the market offers splendid returns.

For eight years, the report says, the farmer has supplied the nation with the cheapest food it ever purchased. Other things have been high, but by comparison farm relief has been sought, the inexorable laws of economics have been at work, until at present the demand for food over-reaches the supply, and thus the farmer is in a position to receive a fair return.

The report states that "good profits are being made by those who have cattle, hogs, sheep, wool, dairy or poultry products to sell. These products are in moderate supply, relative to population and demand which explains the remunerative prices being received for them. Those who make a regular practice of marketing their rough feeds and the bulk of their grains through live stock are in a fortunate position. It is only those who depend regularly on selling their grain and those who are classed as in-and-outers in the live stock business who are in a position to cash in to the best advantage."

The crop outlook for 1928 is excellent, according to the report, but it is predicted that there will be little surplus and that prices will be favorable.

Importance of a profitable season for farmers, as a political issue, is reviewed by the report. In that respect the party in power is favored to an extent no doubt fully offsetting whatever handicap may spring from its record on farm relief legislation. Furthermore, many farmers believe that American agriculture must have adequate protection against the invasion of cheap foods from foreign lands, and so are likely to lean toward the party that makes protection its boast. These two considerations will influence more farm votes than all other campaign issues put together, the corn belt papers report concludes.

CLEVELAND ENJOYS BUILDING BOOM

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 22.—Greater Cleveland is in the throes of a construction boom, according to figures of the municipal building department. Statistics indicate a genuine boom even without the added impetus of spring and fall dashes of construction, city officials said.

Building construction in Cleveland proper so far this year has reached a total valuation of $38,969,275, an increase of approximately $9,000,000 over the corresponding period for last year. The estimated total for the year is $60,000,000.

Comparison of 1927 and 1928 for the six major suburbs of Cleveland shows a total of $49,922,761 for this year and $39,831,443 for last year. Construction in 1928 for Cleveland and the suburbs will reach $76,000,000, it was estimated. Last year, it totaled $59,065,855.

Official figures show more construction now than at any time since many business failures tightened banking institutions, it was said, and this year promises a building program that will almost equal the banner years of 1922 and 1923, when tremendous activity prevailed.

SEVEN ENTRANTS IN AIRPLANE RACE ARE CONTINUING FLIGHT

Three Forced Down; Flyers
Hampered by Fog
And Wind.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Sept. 22.—Seven of the ten airplanes which started in the Los Angeles to Cincinnati class A air race lined up at Meacham Field here this morning for today's flight to Pine Bluff, Ark.

The take-off was scheduled for 10:30 a. m. It was expected the three entries which failed to arrive at this control last night yet might arrive in time for the start of today's lap.

Fog and high winds over west Texas hampered the flyers on yesterday's lap from El Paso. The fog over Quadrangle Mountain defeated Samuel H. Turner, Alexandria, Va., who landed his Berline monoplane at Pecos with only a few minutes gasoline supply left.

Engine trouble forced down W. H. Emery, Bradford, Pa., and H. W. Myers, Los Angeles.

Myers brought his Simplex down east of Midland after it developed engine trouble.

Class B planes which spent the night at El Paso, Tex., were expected to arrive here at 11 a. m. today, continuing then to Pine Bluff, Ark., for the night control.

According to present plans, both class A and B pilots will complete the race to Cincinnati together.

Robert Duke, Pittsburgh, who won second prize in the transcontinental race to Los Angeles, landed his plane at El Paso yesterday. He went into first place in the race. He landed at 2:11:02 p. m.

The four entrants in the class B race will leave El Paso this morning and were expected to begin arriving here shortly after the seven class A planes depart.

Fog and rain appeared probably again today over the route through Texas.

STORCK'S PLANE IS WRECKED IN FRANCE

MARSEILLES, France, Sept. 22.—The tiny around-the-world seaplane of George H. Storck, Seattle, overturned today while leaving the Marseilles Basin at 10 a. m. for the east. Storck was unhurt but the plane was badly damaged.

Storck left London a week ago to fly eastward around the world. The plane was driven to the world's smallest seaplane base at Marseilles, where it was overturned and almost at the cost of the flyer's life. His small Avro seaplane was too heavily loaded and it buckled and broke in two at the moment it left the water. Watchers ashore went to the rescue in a motorboat and fished Storck out of the wreckage.

The plane carried more than a usual amount of fuel to permit a long flight across the Mediterranean.

FEAR SLOT MACHINE OPERATOR HAS BEEN KILLED BY ENEMIES

Question Suspects In Disappearance Of Rack-
eteer

CLEVELAND, Sept. 22.—Fears that Nathan Weisenberg, "vending machine" distributor whose home was bombed yesterday, may have met the fate meted out in the past year to two others interested in the slot machine "racket" were felt today.

Weisenberg has not been heard from since he left his home at 9 p. m. Thursday to go to Buffalo. Business associates said he never was away twenty-four hours before without communicating with them.

Two men arrested in connection with the bombing were being questioned Saturday about Weisenberg's mysterious disappearance. Both of the men were questioned earlier this year when Lawrence Lupo, Weisenberg's friend and business associate, was murdered.

Lupo was the slayer of Ralph H. "Curly" Meyers, former deputy sheriff, and a slot machine agent. Lupo pleaded self defense, and Weisenberg, who witnessed the killing gave testimony that aided Lupo to win his freedom.

Weisenberg controlled a large number of what he has always designated as "vending machines." Demand was made that he pay from $4 to $5 a month to the racketeering "kings" for each machine.

He refused. Immediately afterward nineteen of his machines were stolen from persons to whom he had leased them. His associates said he appealed to a powerful political boss with the result that the thefts were halted.

Trucks used in the bold thefts were traced to the black money out of the county's slot machine operators. It was said.

Since that time Weisenberg has expressed fears that an attempt would be made upon his life. He expected the attack to come when he drove into his garage at night.

When he left Thursday night, he was carrying a large sum of money, and wore two diamonds, each of which were worth more than $2,000, his friends said.

PERSONALITIES IN CAMPAIGN SUBJECT OF BORAH WARNING

Liar, Slanderers To Disappear After Election
He Says

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., Sept. 22.—Personalities do not clarify issues nor enlighten voters, Senator William B. Borah, Republican of Idaho, warned in an address here last night. "Bitterness already has entered the presidential campaign," Borah said.

"There are important issues enough in the campaign to engage all our time and our best thought, and our most unselfish patriotism," he said. "Let us discuss and consider them."

"When the shouting and the groaning die away about three o'clock in the morning of November 7, all liars and slanderers will disappear with it."

"You have tremendous interests in the campaign. The next four years of administration will profoundly affect you. It will have to do with the happiness of our home, with our economic health, with our economic freedom. They will have tremendously to do with the business interests of the country, with its prosperity and with our continued progress as a people."

Senator Borah explained he was prompted to make his remarks by the repeated questioning during the day about purely personal matters in the campaign.

UTILITIES PROPAGANDA BEING REVEALED BY COMMISSION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—New evidence of attempts by power interests to influence the public, the press, and colleges on controversial questions was before the Federal Trade Commission today after three days of open hearings in its renewed utility propaganda inquiry.

Through testimony and documentary evidence, the commission this week developed a surveillance of the New Jersey legislature; close relations between Iowa colleges and utilities; and distribution to editors of a news service secretly paid for by the Alabama Power Company.

Those shown to have been paid for speeches included William Allen White, Kansas editor, who referred to utility men as "priests of a new order" in a talk before a utility convention in 1925.

Turning its spotlight on New Jersey utilities, the investigation disclosed that the New Jersey utilities association has lobbied against many bills in the state legislature at Trenton. Prof. Theodore J. Grayson, University of Pennsylvania, was active in this work, according to the testimony.

Matters entered in the record showed that utility conferences were held at Iowa State University at the suggestion of Dean C. Williams who promise to co-operate with the power industry.

Expenses of a number of Iowa professors who attended utility meetings were paid for them, records revealed. Iowa State College, Harvard and Northwestern received money from utilities for research work on power problems.

Testimony by Marco B. Darnall, Florence, Ala., editor, developed that his news service goes regularly to 200 newspapers at the expense of the Alabama Power Company.

No hearing was held today. The next session will be Tuesday.

ANTI-SALOON BODY OPPOSES NOMINEE DUE TO CATHOLICITY

Urges Protestant Domination In Editorial

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 22.—The Ohio Anti-Saloon League was on record today as urging defeat of Governor Al Smith for president because he is a member of the Catholic Church.

Voters of Ohio, in an editorial in The American Issue, official organ of the league, are urged to vote for Herbert Hoover and against Smith if they "believe in Anglo-Saxon Protestant domination" and in "the maintenance of that civilization founded by our Puritan ancestors and preserved by our fathers."

The league has heretofore contended that it was opposed to Smith solely because of his attitude on prohibition and that his religion did not enter into the question.

Denouncing Smith as a candidate who "appeals to the sporty, jazz and liberal element of our population," the editorial goes on to declare that "the Anglo-Saxon Protestants, working through both parties, have dominated America and made it what it is today."

Charging that Smith "is inclined to open the gates to foreigners, with their liberal tendencies and un-American customs," it asserts that "element" will be found supporting him at the election.

Senator Simeon D. Pess, Republican candidate for long term as senator, made a similarly vicious attack on Smith at an organization meeting of Republican candidates and workers here Friday.

"We do not have a nominee for president for whom we must apologize," Pess said. "Our leader never felt called upon to deny that he was intoxicated and drove down Fifth Avenue at fifty miles an hour, or that he was drunk at a certain fair."

STRATTON LAUNCHES ATTACK ON NOMINEE TO ANSWER CHARGES

Declares Governor Side-
Stepped All Real
Issues

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 22.—The hall in which Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, Democratic candidate for president, Thursday night bitterly alleged "whispering" last night echoed to a counter-attack by Dr. John Roach Stratton, Baptist minister of the New York Calvary Church.

"I have come to you tonight for a few more 'whisperings,'" the minister told his audience of several thousand persons. "I am here to whisper slyly to you tonight."

"Gov. Smith has run to cover from an assault upon his record," Stratton continued. "He was instructed to ignore me."

"But how absurd is the position into which he has gotten himself. He cannot ignore Stratton, and Bishop Canon, and William Allen White and Superintendent Miller of the New York City League, or others of us who really know his record."

The governor, Dr. Stratton said, "completely side-stepped the real issues over his record as a public man, in his adroit speech."

The speaker called Gov. Smith the "political personality of Tammany," which he defined as an "organized political corruption," and launched into a defense of the entrance of ministers into political campaign discussions.

REPORT SHOWS XENIA CITY FINANCES GOOD

Bonded Debt Will Be Entirely Wiped Out In 1934; Condition Better Than In Most Cities.

Reflecting the financial stability of Xenia, a report prepared by City Auditor T. H. Zell dealing with the bonded indebtedness of the city indicates that unless additional bond issues are initiated in the mean time, Xenia will wipe out its debt in 1934.

Xenia can point with pride to a healthy financial condition because the present outstanding bonded debt is actually only $30,500, lower than a great majority of the cities of the same size in the state.

The bonded debt in the General Fund, for which taxes are directly assessed, stands at $33,000, but the interest and sinking fund trustees have $22,500 credit to apply to the deficit, which leaves the actual net indebtedness only $10,500.

This figure, however, does not include sale of $11,000 worth of bonds by City Commission this week to finance purchase of a new fire truck.

Excluding this last bond issue, the last bond in the General Fund will be retired in 1934.

Bonds now outstanding and the year they fall due are as follows: $12,000 due in 1933, issued for fire department building; $1,000 due in 1929, for fire truck; $24,000 due in 1934, and $1,500 due in 1931, for sewage disposal plant; $5,000 due in 1930, and $6,000 due in 1930, city's portion of paving W. Main St. and other streets; $3,500 due in 1931, city's portion of paving E. Church St.

The special assessment bonded debt for streets and sewers, paid for by citizens directly benefited by the improvements, amount to $107,650. Providing no new obligations are incurred meanwhile, this debt will be wiped out and the last bond retired in 1936.

The utility or municipal waterworks debt, which is paid off each year out of the earnings of the plant, has been reduced to $282,000. The plant will be entirely free from debt in 1951 when the last bond is retired.

AUTOISTS UNHURT
AS CARS COLLIDE

Occupants of both machines escaped injury in a collision between an auto driven by Frank H. Schwebel, 132 High St., and P. A. Harris, colored, driving a truck of the Peters Dry Cleaning Co., on E. Main St. near the dry cleaning establishment early Friday afternoon.

Both machines were traveling east, according to a report made to Deliver Beiden, auto club secretary, who estimated both cars were damaged to the extent of $50.

AUTOS DAMAGED

Both cars were slightly damaged when a coach being driven south on N. Detroit St., by Austin Gill, employee of the O. S. and S. O. Home, collided with a coach driven by Mrs. E. A. DeMint, Xenia, who was backing the auto out of a parking place in front of the Dakota Bldg., at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. Neither driver was hurt and the total damage to both cars was estimated at $45.

PITCHER WILL WED

CLEVELAND, Sept. 22.—Walter Miller, left-handed pitcher for the Cleveland Indians, is to be married Oct. 6 to Miss Samantha Graham, of Parma, it became known today. Miss Graham is a stenographer in a law office. It was there that Miller met her four years ago. They have been engaged two months.

BANKS WILL CHARGE
SMALL ACCOUNTS

COLUMBUS, Sept. 22.—Columbus banks next month will begin charging a service-balancing payment of thirty cents each a month, which will be debited on the last of each month to all checking accounts which do not show an average daily balance of $100.

In announcing the service charge, bank officials said there was "no desire to deprive anyone of the advantages of checking account services. On the contrary, we are anxious for every depositor to understand all the different ways a checking account may be used profitably and to agree with the sound business principles governing the new arrangements."

Emphasis was placed on the fact that the service charge will be placed on checking accounts only and will have no effect on savings accounts.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Stock holders of General Motors Corporation today were speculating on the size of the extra stock dividend confidently expected at the November dividend meeting of the corporation. The general belief was that 50 per cent stock split would be made and some predicting a 100 per cent distribution.

President Alfred J. Sloan, Jr., of General Motors issued a bulletin statement before leaving for Europe last night on the Olympic. He intimated that stockholders could expect an extra stock dividend; stated that business abroad was setting new records for the company and added his belief that earnings for the corporation would set a new record in 1928.

Farm Notes

HAVE ADVANTAGE
Ohio potato growers, during the past 10 years, have been receiving more than 25 cents a bushel more than the average price for the United States, it appears through statistics arranged by Charles W. Hauck of the rural economics department of the Ohio State University. The average premium of the Ohio grower during the decade, has been twenty-eight cents a bushel over the price for the United States as a whole, and Ohio nine to fifty cents a bushel over the prices received by the growers in the adjoining states of Michigan, Pennsylvania, and New York.

In 1921 this premium went up to forty-five cents a bushel over the price for the United States. In 1925 it dropped to thirteen cents, but in each year of the ten there has been a premium.

Nearly adequate markets, which could be reached quickly and with small transportation costs have been responsible for the premium, not discrimination by the public, nor extra high quality of Ohio potatoes. Jobbing prices on city markets have shown no such premium for potatoes grown in this state.

Ohio potatoes cannot claim any higher quality than those grown in adjoining states.

But because the location of the Ohio farmer in relation to his markets, is advantageous, and because the potato production of the state has been less than the potato consumption, the price at the farm, which means more to the producer than does the price on the city market, has remained consistently high.

Industrial centers within short distances from Ohio farmers have given the Ohio potato grower his advantage. The consuming population is large and the producing population is small in proportion to it. Only about one half enough potatoes have been produced in Ohio in the past ten years to supply the demand within the state. The average production in the United States at that time was 3.5 bushels per capita, and the average Ohio production was only 1.7 bushels per capita.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE BETTER DAYS—Say not thou, What is the cause that former days were better than these? For thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this.—Ecc. 7:10.

HOW CANADA "SOLVED" THE PROBLEM

"Prohibition is a failure; Canada has what we want." So say some of the leaders who would modify the liquor laws.

But just what are the facts about Canada? Here are a few of them:

The Liquor Board of the Province of Ontario reports sales amounting to $1,000,000 a week. The Board of the Province of Alberta announces that in the second year of "control" 4,000,000 gallons of intoxicants were sold there. The seven provincial liquor control boards for a Canadian territory of 10,000,000 inhabitants report a united liquor expenditure of $160,000,000—$16 per inhabitant per year!

Does this mean that the Canadians are drinking beer instead of hard liquor? The reports of these same boards of control show that hard liquor sales have increased 33 per cent in two years. Even more, they show that they have increased 50 per cent since beer parlors were opened.

The first year that this system was used in the Province of Alberta, 60,000 permits were issued. Two years later, 144,000 permits were issued.

How about drunkenness in Canada? According to the Montreal Star, since the government has gone into the liquor business, drunkenness among women has increased 53 per cent. Police Commissioner Burton, of Manitoba, says "if all the drunks were arrested there would be no room for them in the jails." The Saskatchewan Liquor Board announces that "arrests for drunkenness increased 125 per cent in the first eight months of government control."

But it may be argued that the Canadian plan would get rid of bootleggers. Listen to what the Alberta Liquor Board has to say: "Our greatest problem is moonshine in the country districts." The Saskatchewan authorities declare that "as much liquor is sold by bootleggers as is sold in the government stores." And in British Columbia, arrests for bootlegging went up 111 per cent the first year of so-called government control.

MAKING A "BABY" OF GROWN SON

Chester T. Crowell, widely known writer, believes that hundreds of thousands of American parents are doing both themselves and their children an injustice by sacrificing to send the children to college. A boy, he contends, who is allowed to grow to manhood dependent on his father's checkbook for his livelihood and pleasures is inevitably handicapped when he must face the world for himself.

"Our present system of education is making a slave of papa, and it is well calculated to make a baby of son," he writes in McClure's magazine. "If a boy goes about the business of self-education with intelligence and determination he will achieve vastly more than four years of college life ordinarily gives."

If a boy really wants a college education he will get it whether his dad pays the bill or not. If he doesn't want it that bad it is usually a waste of time and money to give it to him.

You can't uplift people by sitting down on them.

The Way of the World

SATURDAY AFTERNOONS

Saturday afternoon represents an opportunity that few take advantage of. Of course a great many THINK they take advantage of Saturday afternoon—but do they? They use it more and more as the beginning of a week-end holiday. Or, in case of some, it is well along on a week-end holiday which began on Friday. Most people are coming to the British idea of a long week-end. But the real opportunity of Saturday afternoon is for work. Most people are doing something else. They are out of the way. Few come into the office to interrupt and to trouble. More work can be done comfortably and easily on Saturday afternoon than on any full day of the week. This is a useless paragraph. Nobody will try it.

CIRCUS MEN

Who have contributed more to clean fun and a good time in this more or less sad world than the circus men? The famous ones have gone or are passing on. Barnum is dead, and so is Bailey. One Ringling is left. John G. Robinson, who founded Robinson's circus, has passed away, and now his son, "Gil" Robinson, well-known showman and author of circus history, is dead.

The old showmen did a lot for human happiness. It is fortunate that there are those left who still carry on the big top.

"SHOW BOAT"

This is not an advertising column but the writer would be falling down on a good turn if he didn't advise tourists to New York to see what is perhaps the best musical comedy ever made—"Show Boat." It is a dramatization of Edna Ferber's novel. This show is clean—and it has everything. It has comedy, high, middle and low, and it has pathos. It has plot and it has music. If you work Saturday afternoon—as per advice in the first article in this column—you have a right to see "Show Boat" on Saturday night.

WEEDS

Henry Ford predicts automobile tires made of common, roadside weeds, and motor cars fueled with alcohol. He is probably right. Edison has discovered that some sort of rubber can be made from almost every weed that grows. Oleander plants seem the best producers. No need worry about shortage of gasoline. Alcohol can run motor cars, and alcohol can be made of almost any vegetable matter. The value of Ford is not altogether as a manufacturer but as a man who can keep the people thinking about new things.

The Diary of a New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK—An American woman, landing from Paris, declared 325 chemises as part of her personal wardrobe. The wardrobe was contained in 26 trunks in charge of two maids. However, such a case is extraordinary, even among the wealthy. Persons are traveling lighter now than they used to, a steamship pier head porter tells me. Many men now go aboard with one bag and no more clothes than they would take on a trip to Chicago; and women travel as lightly, because of the scantiness of their attire.

A. H. Woods the stage producer, recently deliberately went aboard a liner for London with a brief case and nothing else. He didn't want to be bothered with baggage. He wasn't inconvenienced, for the large boats have arcades of shops in which everything, including clothing, but excluding row boats, is sold. The old-time average traveler used to have two or three trunks on a voyage to Europe.

Some more of the numerous queries directed at the columnist by readers in the provinces:

Who were the original couple in "Abie's Irish Rose?"

What is the address of Otto H. Kahn?

I would like information in regard to Tammany Hall. In what way is it worse than most men's clubs?

Where in New York can I sell a six-shilling piece dated 1776? Please give me Mr. George M. Cohan's address?

(1571 Broadway, New York City.)

Is there a hotel in New York exclusively for women?

(Yes, the Martha Washington hotel.)

Are there any factories in New York, or is the city all houses and shops?

Is Texas Guinan's hair really red?

(Tex says that at present it is.)

What is the relative size of New York and London?

(The 191 "registration area" population of London was only 4,482,249, but allowing for the "outer ring," the population was 7,476,168. The 1920 population of the five boroughs which comprise New York City was in excess of 5,000,000. Incidentally, all such facts are in almanacs, year books, encyclopedias, etc., available in all libraries, book-shops, etc.)

The slave anklet fad has lasted longer than I thought it would. Women are still wearing them. However, a jeweler tells me that he frequently has orders from customers to change the engraved initials on the anklets. He estimates that about half of all the buyers of slave anklets eventually have them changed.

"Only a woman that was funny about love would wear one," he remarked skeptically.

What do you want to know about New York? Ask C. K. 2200 Times building, New York, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

MENU HINT

Broiled Lamb Chop
Potato Souffle
Tomatoes Stuffed with Cucumbers
Custard

The menu today is planned for three people. Lamb chops are not very large, and it is generally necessary to provide two chops for each person. You know your own family appetite, however, so can order accordingly.

Today's Recipes

Potato Souffle.—To two cups of cold mashed potatoes add half a cup of milk, a pinch of salt, a tablespoon of butter, two tablespoons of flour and two eggs, beaten very light, as the souffle recipe. Mix all the ingredients together until very light. Put in a pudding dish, spread a little butter over the top and bake until brown.

Tomatoes Stuffed with Cucumbers.—Chop the cucumber, add a little green pepper and onion, add to the pulp of the tomato which you have scooped out, stuff tomatoes and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Suggestions To Clean Silver

The "galvanic process" rather than rubbing with silver polish is more effective in cleaning sterling silver. The silver should be placed in an aluminum pan in which there is boiling water sufficient to cover, with salt and soda in the proportion of one teaspoonful of each to a quart of water. After taking the silver out of the solution wash it in warm water and soap suds, rinse in clear water and rub off with a bit of chamalo or polishing cloth. However, this process should be used only for "bright" sterling, as it removes all oxide, and articles with a gray or oxidized finish cannot be given this treatment without brightening the finish, or rather removing it.

THE GREAT HUMAN PUZZLE

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

COMMON SENSE AND EXERCISE

All of us know that it is necessary to exercise. We have no chance of escaping that knowledge. There are books written about it, lectures dedicated to the subject, and if you read this column regularly, you will admit that rarely a week passes that I do not stress upon the importance of regular exercise.

However, like all other necessary and essential things, sometimes it is easier to talk about than to do. Our lives, nevertheless, are so constituted that it is quite possible for every one of us to work out a plan of exercise without letting it in any way interfere with what we are doing.

Let us say, for instance, that you are a housewife. I take this example first, because I think that housewives are, as a general thing, inclined to believe themselves too busy to exercise. They are not. To be sure, electrical appliances have, I know, minimized the actual amount of physical work there is in a house. Sweeping, probably one of the best all-around exercises, has become an almost obsolete practice since the vacuum cleaner has come in. The bending and stooping, which is so perfect a thing for the body, is hardly done any more. We have electrical polishers, electrical dusters and electrical carpet beating machines, so what is a lady to do to obtain that necessary amount of physical action?

Well, in the first place, she can dispense with one of these electrical aides every day. I don't advocate at all that you use a broom in place of a vacuum cleaner. It is not anywhere near so sanitary, and it is foolish to give yourself too much unnecessary work. But suppose that instead of depending on a feather duster, you buy a length of cheesecloth, and dust with this. You will find that the under legs of the piano and tables will require the use of many muscles that you have almost forgotten you had—waist muscles and diaphragm and back muscles!

Then try to remember everything you do to maintain an erect and graceful posture. Instead of bending over the dishes, elevate them and wash your dishes standing very, very straight. Instead of bending over your tables while preparing vegetables, sit down, but sit erectly.

Go in for gardening. There is no better exercise. Stop using your telephone to order your groceries, and walk to and from the market, carrying some of the things home will help you to utilize the arm muscles which, after all, were made for utility purposes.

For the younger girls among you, try walking part way to the office. Choose a lunch place, a little out of the beaten track, and take ten minutes of your lunch hour to walk there briskly. It will do you far more good than sitting in a hot, stuffy room, chattering while waiting for your order.

Go in for sports. Tennis and golf are most attractive, and once you have become a fan, you will refuse to permit anything to come between you and your regular exercise—recreation.

Do not go in for too strenuous exercise. While it is quite true that women are historically famous for marvelous feats of physical strength, we must remember that generations of untrammelled physical health. The modern girl has no such record behind her. Her mother and her grandmother did much to weaken their splendid bodies with tight and incorrect corsets, and we, as a consequence, are suffering from the effects of the weakened abdominal muscles which result from this fashion, even unto the third generation!

HOW WOMAN SHOP WORKER CAN REDUCE HER WEIGHT

"In all your writings on reducing, I never have seen anything on how factory workers can reduce. Believe me, it is a very real problem. Any woman who stays at home can reduce, but how about the one who has to take a lunch, usually sandwiches? I eat fruit myself, but hardly anyone else has will power to eat only fruit after five hours of work."

"I can reduce, but my problem is how to stay reduced. I drink a glass of chocolate malted milk before I go to work, eating either grapes or apples for lunch, and for supper a can of peas, some meat and some graham crackers or something like that. It answers the purpose and I feel fine, but I am getting mortally tired of it."

onion, one tablespoon butter, little salt and pepper. Mix. Cut three peppers lengthwise, remove seeds, put on in cold water, let come to a full boil then take out and stuff with above mixture. Put one slice of tomato on each half of pepper, cover tomato with cheese and paprika. Bake about thirty minutes.

probably walk ten miles a day in my work and if there is a muscle in my body that doesn't get plenty of exercise, I don't know where it is. Please discuss the factory girl who wants to reduce. I'm sure you will have the gratitude of hundreds."

First I want to tell you, M., that it is harder for the woman who says at home and is around food to reduce than it is for the one who is out! My point of view:

Naturally, a physical worker can burn many more calories while reducing than one who does sedentary work, but the question of reducing is exactly the same—just limiting the number of calories so that some of the energy will be supplied by the body fat.

You take a chocolate malted milk for breakfast. That probably contains 200 C. In chocolate syrup, 100 in malted milk powder and 150 in milk, in all, 450 calories. I think it would be better for you to have solid food; it would stay with you longer. You could have quite a bit for 450 calories.

For lunch you would have 200 C. of fruit, a sandwich made of two slices of bread, one quarter of an inch thick (50 C. each),

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

"It isn't so important what you say," declares a friend who writes advertisements, "as how often you say it. What I mean is that repetition even of a silly slogan will drive the name of your product into people's minds. Indeed, I doubt if any slogan could be so foolish that it wouldn't be better than none. I just thought of a line that might be used to advertise a new brand of talcum powder and I have no doubt that if it were repeated often enough it would make that brand a household word."

Here is the slogan he suggests: "WILL NOT EXPLODE IN THE FACE."

With one-half tablespoonful of butter (50 C.), two or three leaves of lettuce and two or three slices of tomato (15 C.), and a glass of buttermilk or skim milk (80 C.), or even a glass of whole milk (160 C.)—with a total of only 425 C.—With your work, you ought to reduce on 1,500 or 1,600 C. a day, so that would leave you 500 to 700 C. for supper. But I wouldn't take a whole can of peas, M., every day. Vary them with greens and other vegetables and vary your supper. In other words, Three-quarters of a cup of peas is 100 C.

I'll give you the foundation for the reducing diet which we all should have to get the needed elements. Then you fit it in to your regime.

Daily Foundation Diet.

FIRST: At least a half pound of some watery vegetables (the green leaf vegetables are especially good)—lettuce, spinach, celery, asparagus, watercress, beet tops, greens, cabbage, tomatoes, etc. A half pound of these, cooked or uncooked, without fat, approximately 50 C.

SECOND: A half pound of other vegetables—Carrots, beets, onions, parsnips and squash—approximately 100 C. without fat.

THIRD: 200 to 300 C. of fruit. Good sized orange, apple, pear—100 C. each. Best to take large share of the vegetables and fruits raw.

FOURTH: At least one pint of skim or buttermilk in some form—drinks, in cooking, or cheese. You need it for lime and complete protein.

FIFTH: One medium small potato, 100 C. OR one large slice whole wheat bread, one-half inch thick, same number of calories, or two-thirds cup of cereal. If you have starchy or sugary desserts, omit these.

SIXTH: One to two teaspoonfuls cod liver oil (35 C. each), or two to four cod liver oil tablets (practically no calories).

SEVENTH: Protein. You must have more protein, besides what you get in the milk, so take three to four ounces of very lean meat or fish or eggs (150 to 200 C. total).

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

NEW YORK—Alfred E. Smith's election, by itself, so they tell us, will not make this country one bit wetter.

No, not by itself.

It will be a step in that direction, however—if Al is elected. After which the "big men" behind his candidacy intend to proceed with the other steps. They know, as well as anybody knows, that the president cannot change the law. They are not putting up three or four or five millions of dollars to take just one step which they are fully aware will not be as far as they want to travel.

There are several steps to be taken. This merely happens to be the first one.

Of course it is no new discovery that Smith is the wet candidate—not necessarily exclusively wet, but wet, among other things. The "big men" behind him are pretty nearly exclusively wet, but it is my impression, amounting to a certainty, after basking for a week in the New York atmosphere and listening to the conversation.

Some very powerful moguls have grown exceedingly sick of prohibition in the last four years. Their pockets have been tricked. Their yachts have been fired on.

Their patience finally blew up with a bang. A few of them simply said, "By heck! this has gone on long enough. We propose to put up whatever amount of money may be necessary to stop it."

To begin with they needed a good presidential candidate.

He must be wet, but he must have other qualifications. All the other qualifications in the world would not have made a dry acceptable to them. Nevertheless, as mighty important folk, with a huge stake in having a high-class tenant in the White House, it was out of the question for them to endorse any cheap politician, merely for his wetness.

Smith was almost made to order for the purpose. He is honest and able. He is wet. He suits big business and—in New York, at any rate—is a great vote-puller. Whether or not he can win remains to be seen, but if he cannot it is hard to think of anybody else who could, on the same ticket.

If it had not been for the wet and dry consideration most of Smith's "big business" supporters certainly would have lined up behind Hoover, being Republican by habit.

There is nothing about Hoover to terrify a business man.

Smith, however, by what he said, made it possible for "big business" to feel safe in voting for him, too. Some notable wets floundered, evidently considering him at least as satisfactory as Hoover on business grounds, and more so on account of his wetness.

The point I make is that the bulk of Smith's really formidable financial backing obviously is wet backing—its main interest, in this campaign, is prohibition modification.

Now, does it stand to reason that these hard-boiled old days are ready to spend up into the millions to elect a wet to the White House—and leave him there, tied hand and foot with a dry law that he cannot alter—having entirely failed to accomplish what they are fighting now to accomplish? Certainly not!

The next thing will be to get busy on congress.

And the outfit that can elect a president can throw an awful scare into a good many senators and representatives.

Living and Loving

Should Girl Sacrifice Love To Stay Home With Mother?

For a young person to make it, his or her plans of marriage and a home of their own, to stay with the old folks." Girls are more likely to be called on to make this sacrifice than men, and it always seems unfair to me. I wonder how many lonely women could tell the same story—an impatient young lover who refuses to wait an indefinite number of years for "something to turn up."

To release the girl they love and allow her to marry. Then when she is a middle aged or elderly woman, she is left to eat her heart out in loneliness. Often the sacrifice is needless, if the parents could only consider it so, and plan accordingly, even if it involved considerable sacrifice on their part.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl of 25 years and have been going of with a fellow four years. If I don't get married at Christmas time he is going away and will never come back. My mother isn't well and I am the only girl and think my place is at home with her, but he can't see it that way. I love him very much, and sometimes think I cannot live without him. I worried about mother, but I worried more about losing my friend. What would you do if you were me? I will be waiting to hear your reply.

BER-LINE.

I would tell the matter over with mother and see if arrangements cannot be made for some one else to stay with her if she has to have some one. Your love has been faithful for four years and I don't think you should ask him to wait any longer unless it is absolutely necessary. It may be that you are sacrificing yourself needlessly. If your mother really loves you she will want your happiness more than all else, and will be willing to do everything she can to further it.

FOR BREAD AND BUTTER

Here with the whole of an affectionate letter, written after the lapse of a week by a boy in camp who, the old folks feared, might be suffering from homesickness.

"Dear Dad: This is one of the worst periods when you are supposed to rest and write letters home. This is one of the letters I would probably not have written so soon, but to get into the dining room tonight I have to have written a letter home. It is about dinner time, now, so must close. Your son, Bill."

Peter's Adventure

THE WARNING THAT WASN'T HEEDED

"That relieves my mind a little," remarked Al Cross, with a sigh, upon overhearing the sailor's scheme. "At least neither of my cousins is to suffer a worse fate than being taken captive, and, after all, I don't know that it would be so bad to fall into the hands of those sailors. They seem to be a good-hearted lot and doubtless with them one would get enough to eat. But I shall warn the boys, anyhow—they ought to know what is going on."

"Hello! There comes a Two-Legs with a rope; and look, he is fastening the blubber upon the end of it. Now he is making ready to throw the line over the ship's side. If I don't hurry it will be too late. I know those cousins of mine were enough to be sure that they would not wait very long after the blubber strikes the water."

"I am off, Cormorant! should not feel a bit comfortable if I didn't warn the boys of it. Look! that is hiding in that piece of fat. My cousins, foolish things, will think, 'of course, that is a choice morsel of fish, as I should, too, if I was down there. Perhaps they will not believe me when I tell them the trick that the sailors are trying to play on them, but at any rate

I shall have done my duty. So long!"

"Without another word Al Cross flew down to join his cousins and Cormorant saw him talking to them very earnestly. But evidently, just as he feared, they didn't believe word of what he was saying. "Suddenly the sailor cast his line over the ship. Brushing past the Albatross who was trying so hard to warn them, the two white birds made a dash for the blubber and snapped at it with beaks wide open."

"THE TWO BIRDS MADE A DASH FOR THE BLUBBER, WITH BEAKS WIDE OPEN."

"Both missed the first time, but they had no intention of letting the tempting tidbit get away from them. Rumping into each other in their greedy haste the made a second try and this time the smaller of the two was successful.

"Snap!" went his beak and dainty morsel was within his mouth but so, too, alas, was the hook."

Central Gridders Prepare For Opening Game

WASHINGTON FIRST OPPONENT OF SEASON; IS ANCIENT ENEMY

Long Athletic Relations Give Fayette County Team One-Victory Edge; Has Never Beaten Kolb-Coached Eleven.

With new blood and enthusiasm injected into the squad this year, Xenia Central High School will put the finishing touches next week on its preparation for the inaugural game of the season with Washington C. H. on the latter's gridiron.

Gridiron rivalry between the two schools dates back at least to 1911. Over this long period, Washington holds a slight edge over the Blue and White in the matter of victories. In eighteen games played, Xenia has won eight times, Washington nine times while one contest ended in a scoreless tie.

During this length of time, Washington has piled up a total of 201 points to 145 for Xenia.

Central, consequently, needs a victory over its traditional rival next Friday afternoon to even the seventeen-year-old feud.

Incidentally, beginning with the regime of Coach Victor Kolb, Central has won its last three games with Washington, winning in 1925, 13 to 7; in 1926, 7 to 0, and in 1927, 14 to 6.

GRID SEASON OPENS ON NEXT SATURDAY; "BIG THREE" IDLE

Chicago Will Play Two Games Same Afternoon

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The football season officially opens a week from today. One hundred and seventy-five games, including two double-headers, are scheduled next Saturday.

Princeton, Harvard, and Yale—once the mighty triumvirate of the east, but now just three other football teams—have three of the few eleven teams that do not swing into action next week.

A. A. Stage, one of the nation's oldest coaches, will send the Chicago Maroons against two foes, Ripon and South Carolina, a week hence. Occidental on the Pacific Coast also has two games for Saturday.

The five best football teams in the east last year were Yale, Army, Princeton, Dartmouth and Pittsburgh. Yale had perhaps the best record of the quintet, losing only to Georgia in an early season game. Pittsburgh was a close second and Army, Princeton and Dartmouth were just a step behind Yale and Pittsburgh.

All five ought to have good teams again this year, but the east's best team may not come from that group. Pennsylvania, Navy, Harvard, New York University and others have prospects, equally as bright.

GRID CAPTAINS

ARTHUR FRENCH HARVARD

Arthur E. French, broad jumper, sprinter and halfback, is captain of the Harvard football team this fall. He has played in the Harvard backfield for the last two years, and has shown himself to be a runner of the shifty type. He is at his best in an open field, where his twisting and dodging count to the best advantage.

When Coach Arnold Harwood was hard pressed for a quarterback last fall, French was tried at the position. But it was soon found that his value was much greater at half.

French first starred at football around Boston. He played in the backfield for Worcester academy.

In his first year at Harvard he was elected captain of the frosh eleven. He is 21, stands six feet in height, and weighs about 180 pounds.

FORMER XENIANS IN BIBLICAL DRAMA TO BE PRESENTED HERE

Frant Lott and Robert Collins, both former Xenians, will take part in sketches from the Biblical drama, "John the Baptist," which will be portrayed at the union church service at Central High School auditorium Sunday evening.

The sketches from the drama will be preceded by a devotional worship period, led by Xenia ministers.

Mrs. Irene Stone, writer and dramatic teacher, will give a short address on "Bible Drama and Young People," professor Merrill Stone will outline the proposed school of Bible dramatics for Xenia. Places will be reserved in the auditorium for young people of the various churches. "This is distinctly a young people's service to which the older people are also urged to attend," according to Mr. Stone.

"The Xenia Ministerial Association expects to determine the extent of the interest in this new departure of church activity for young people, which is both enjoyable and helpful," a local minister said Saturday. "And I hope that every church in Xenia will send that its young people attend this service, which will be unusually interesting."

BOXWELL ENROLLS AT WILMINGTON
Paul Boxwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Boxwell, N. Galloway St., one of the most outstanding athletes ever developed at Xenia Central High School, has enrolled at Wilmington College and was expected to break into the lineup against the Division "A" eleven of Antioch College in the opening football game for both schools at Wilmington Saturday afternoon.

Boxwell starred in both football and basketball at Central High and was one of the mainstays of the school in both sports for several successive years. Upon graduation he attended Ohio State University for two terms.

In entering Wilmington College this week Boxwell will probably be in his third year. He practiced with the college football squad and was expected to play a halfback position against Antioch Saturday.

THEY WIN AGAIN

SCOUTS TO ATTEND BIG FOOTBALL GAME

Greene County Boy Scouts and Scout leaders as well as all Scouts in Scoutmaster Area Council are invited to attend free of charge the Ohio State University-Wittenberg College football game at the university stadium, Columbus, O., Saturday, October 6, according to Scout Executive Homer T. Gratz.

The only stipulation made is that Scouts must either wear their uniform, which is preferable, or wear their Scout badge and present themselves at the Scout gate at the stadium.

Ohio State, with a stronger team than last year, is expected to make a bid for the conference title, while Wittenberg this season has practically the same array of veterans that won the Buckeye Conference championship in 1927 without being defeated.

VAN WERT, O., Sept. 22.—Van West officials, in arresting Joseph Remere, New York, on charges of misrepresenting merchandise, believed that had brought to light a nationwide swindle in the sale of tires. The "ring," it was believed, operated in a number of states.

The nationwide activity of tire swindling has prompted representatives of leading rubber companies to make a search throughout the country for men engaged in similar practices.

The Little Yellow House

By BEATRICE BURTON -- RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. ©1928

READ THIS FIRST: Shut within the doors of every home there is the warm and glowing story of a mother's incomparable love. Mrs. Milburn had come to the Little Yellow House, on Flower Street, owned by Uncle Bill Parks, twenty-five years before, when she and Charlie Milburn were married. Through all these years they had only known poverty. Mrs. Milburn had kept everything neat and looked after her three children, Emmy, eighteen; Dan, thirteen, and Perry, twenty-one. While the little yellow house, on the ugly street near the mill, was now sooty and begrimed, it had never lost its charm for Mrs. Milburn. The story opens on Mrs. Milburn's birthday. Grandmother Penland, who had never approved of Mrs. Milburn's marriage to Charlie, has arrived. Grandmother urges Mrs. Milburn to accept fifty dollars as a present from her to pay the long overdue rent. Grandmother takes the opportunity of again scolding about the shiftlessness of Charlie Milburn. Mrs. Milburn finally takes the money. As Grandmother is leaving she asks Emmy to take her out to her car.

Grandmother warns Emmy to pay no attention to Robb Hollis, young mill worker, who is in love with Emmy. Emmy wants a "white collar" man and Robb wears working clothes. In a moment of depression, Emmy decides that she is not going to spend her days in the little old house. She wants something new.

Emmy has brought home a pair of white gloves for a birthday present to her mother. Perry, the son, arrives home with a new lamp for his mother.

Early in the evening Charlie Milburn arrives home in a taxicab. He is intoxicated, as usual, but Mrs. Milburn always tells the children he is ill. Charlie has no money to pay his taxi bill and Mrs. Milburn takes the fifty dollar bill, which she had intended to use for paying the rent.

SNOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER V Emmy ran up to her mother's room and came down with Grandmother Penland's birthday present in her hands.

"I hate to give him this. It's a fifty-dollar bill. Do you suppose he can change it?" Mrs. Milburn asked, her doubting eyes fixed on the taxi driver waiting at the foot of the steps.

"If he hasn't change, he can get it," said Mr. Milburn, wisely, with a wide sweep of his hand.

"Yes, but I'd hate him to lose it. It's the rent money. Mother gave it to me this afternoon for Uncle Bill."

"What's she giving you rent money for, I'd like to know?" Mr. Milburn asked angrily.

Mrs. Milburn stepped out into the night with the bill in her hand. Her husband followed her, and stood swaying on the threshold.

"Why should we keep on paying rent, anyway?" he asked loudly and belligerently. "We've been paying it for the last twenty-five years haven't we? We've bought this shack six times over!"

"Hush!" said Mrs. Milburn over her shoulder. "The neighbors will hear you."

He came back into the hall and stood there, teetering, with his hands in his pockets. His handsome blood-shot eyes fixed themselves on a framed sampler that hung on the wall just behind Emmy.

It had been worked in cross-stitch by Grandmother Penland long ago in her girlhood. It bore the date 1870 and this legend:

"East, west, Home is best."

Mr. Milburn turned his lanky gaze from it to his daughter Emmy.

"Home," he quoted thickly. "Home is the place where, when you have to go, they have to take you in."

He started superbly toward the stairs, then swayed unsteadily for an instant, reaching blindly for something to take hold of. Mrs. Milburn, coming in from the porch, have fallen. Supporting him with her small body, she led him toward the staircase.

"Dizzy, Rosy," he explained. "Sick—sick."

Emmy saw the look in her mother's eyes as she turned them upon him. Dismay and sorrow were in them—but love was in them, too. Love, that unbeatable thing.

"And no wonder you're sick, out on a night like this without an overcoat!" she said to him with a brusque tenderness. "I'm sure it's enough to give you your death of cold, Charlie Milburn!"

"Emmy," she called a moment later from the head of the stairs, "heat some water right away and bring it in the jug for your father; he's very sick."

"Run downstairs and bring me that bottle of peppermint on the shelf under the kitchen clock," she said quickly. "Your father is sick again. I never knew him to have neuralgia any worse than he has it tonight! It's the cold air that did it, I suppose. The bed room door closed upon her words."

"Neuralgia!" said Emmy scornfully. But she said it to herself, going slowly down the stairs.

The light from the new lamp streamed out into the hall. The grate fire crackled, its warmth bringing out the spicy fragrance of the geraniums in the bay window. Out of the doors the hush of the first snowfall wrapped itself around the little house, making it seem very warm and cozy within.

But for once Emmy did not feel the warmth and coziness—did not see the humble, shabby beauty of it. All she could see were the cracks in the wall paper, the worn spots on the chairs, the smoky chimney of the oil lamp, the hot-water faucets that did not work, in the little kitchen.

She leaned her smooth young

"Never let me hear you speak of your father that way again, Emmy."

The jug was an ordinary stone vinegar jug. Filled with hot water and wrapped in an old towel, it had done service as a hot-water bottle in the Milburn family for many years.

Emmy stood beside the stove, looking at it, as she waited for the water to boil. She was doing some deep thinking.

"We haven't even enough money for a rubber water bottle," she said to herself, "and yet my father can ride around in taxicabs."

Her eyes went around the kitchen. They took in the candle burning on the shelf, the old-fashioned sauce-irons on the back of the cracked stove, the cheap tin dishpan hanging on the wall, the rag rugs on the well-scrubbed floor.

"Why, we haven't even the things that Mrs. Brainard has!" she thought rebelliously: "colicloth and electric lights and such things! And mother and me wearing Marianna's old clothes—Why is it?"

On the top of the newel post at the foot of the stairs lay the change from the fifty-dollar bill. Mrs. Milburn had flung it there in her haste when she helped her husband up the steps to his bedroom.

Emmy set the jug down on the floor without making a sound. She counted the money. It did not take her long to do it for there were just four ten-dollar bills folded together. Ten dollars! Ten dollars! Emmy closed her hand over the money and went on up to the second floor. Her mother was just coming out of the big front bedroom, her finger at her lips.

"Hush! He's sleeping!" she whispered as she took the jug. "Don't make a sound—and close the door of Dan's room, please."

Emmy opened her hand and held the four bills out to her on her palm. "Here's your change," she said with bitterness. "My father couldn't even bring you a birthday present, but he could spend Grandmother's on his taxicab. Ten dollars! He ought to be ashamed of himself. I heard what Grandmother said about him this afternoon. Don't think that I didn't."

Mrs. Milburn's face flushed. "Never let me hear you speak of your father that way again, Emmy," she said. "He works all day six days a week, and if he wants to come home in a cab on a bad night, I'm sure it's none of your affair."

"It's none of my affair that I have to wear out Marianna's old rags, either, I suppose!" Emmy broke in passionately. "That I have to live in this dirty old coal-pit of a street? That we never go anywhere or have anything like nice people?" All the rebellion and longing of youth were in her words. Bewildered, sensitive youth that wants, above all things to be "nice people"—to have nothing to be ashamed of—to be able to hold up its head with the crowd.

Mrs. Milburn's eyes took on that look of dismay and anxiety again. "We can't all of us be rich, Emmy. Somebody's got to be poor in this world, just to keep things balanced, I suppose," she said. "Be thankful that you've got your health and strength and a fair share of good looks."

She stopped short as a moaning sound came from the closed room behind her. Her face crumpled up, like a faded rose. For a moment Emmy thought she was going to cry. But she did not.

"Run downstairs and bring me that bottle of peppermint on the shelf under the kitchen clock," she said quickly. "Your father is sick again. I never knew him to have neuralgia any worse than he has it tonight! It's the cold air that did it, I suppose. The bed room door closed upon her words."

"Neuralgia!" said Emmy scornfully. But she said it to herself, going slowly down the stairs.

The Theater

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 22.—Alberto Guglielmi, brother of the late Rudolph Valentino, finally has achieved his ambition to work in motion pictures. He will be seen in "Tropic Madness," an F. B. O. picture, starring Leatrice Joy, George Barraud and Lena Malena.

Guglielmi's part hardly can be considered an important one but represents something to him, for he has been trying continuously to reach the screen for more than two years.

Guglielmi came to Hollywood when his brother's body was brought from New York for burial. After unsuccessful attempts to push the film sale, he underwent a widely advertised operation which was to make his nose a replica of Valentino's.

Even that didn't seem to help and Guglielmi drifted from one producer to another in his attempt to follow in his brother's footsteps.

Now he has a start, he is confident he will soon blossom out into a full time star.

For screen purposes he will be known as Albert Valentino.

S. George Ullman, who served as personal manager to Rudy, hopes to make quite an affair of the memorial services he holds for the famous Sheik each year.

The first anniversary brought thousands of fans and a considerable group of film notables to the Hollywood Mausoleum but this

Twenty Years '08- Ago -'28

The quiet little town of New Burlington was thrown into a tremor of excitement when it was learned that burglars had ransacked the post office and general store owned by Wayne C. Smith.

Legal J. local whirlwind pacer, owned by Ed Thornhill, strained a hind leg and is out of the racing game for the rest of the season.

A disastrous fire at the Zell book store on Green St., was narrowly averted by presence of mind of a customer.

Fire burned a dozen square feet of roof off the two-story frame dwelling on W. Second St., next to the railroad, occupied by Thomas J. Kelly.

"WHEN I SAW YOU LAST, ROSE"

WHEN I saw you last, Rose
You were only so high;
How fast the time goes!

Like a bud ere it blows,
You just peeped at the sky,
When I saw you last, Rose!

Now your petals unclose,
Now your May-time is nigh;
How fast the time goes!

And a life—how it grows!
You were scarcely so shy,
When I saw you last, Rose!

In your bosom it shows
There's a guest on the sly;
(How fast the time goes!)

Is it Cupid? Who knows!
Yet you used not to sigh,
When I saw you last, Rose;
How fast the times goes!

TWO ASK DIVORCES; CASES DISMISSED; OTHER COURT NEWS

Charging his wife with habitual drunkenness, Uriah S. Hedgpeth has brought suit for divorce from Leslie F. Hedgpeth in Common Pleas Court.

For the last two years his wife has been partly intoxicated most of the time and about once every month she would get really drunk and stay away from home in that condition for several days and nights, the plaintiff complains, degrading that he left her because of this habit.

They were married February 21, 1923. No children were born of the union.

In a suit for divorce from Junia Corbett, Helen Corbett charges him with extreme cruelty and seeks custody of their four minor children, Irene, Jerline, Christine and June Ella, also attorney fees and alimony. The couple was married in 1919.

MOTION SUSTAINED

In the case of Leslie Wiley against Thomas Trichon, in Common Pleas Court, motion of the plaintiff to have the real estate described in a motion re-appraised for the reason of lack of bidders under a former execution, has been sustained by the court.

County School News

BEAVER HIGH

Beaver Creek Township High School takes great pleasure in introducing to the community two new teachers: Miss June Thompson, of the English department, and Miss Elizabeth Nicholas, of the Home Economics department. Both of them are proving themselves quite capable in their respective departments, and they have shown great interest in all school activities organization.

Old Beaver started the year of 1928-29 on September 4, with an enrollment of 111 at the outset. Besides the two lady teachers who are new to the organization this year, we have with us from last year's faculty: Supt. A. C. Ewbanks, A. A. Neff, Smith-Hughes agricultural teacher; and Carl E. Smith, of the English and Latin departments.

PHYSICAL TRAINING

Shortly after the opening of the school semester, the groups for physical training at Beaver were definitely organized. For the girls, basketball and calisthenics are the main part of the program. The freshmen and sophomores, juniors and seniors alternate regularly under Miss Thompson and Miss Nicholas in their activities. Likewise, the boys meet at the same time with Mr. Smith or Mr. Neff for their activities, part of these being military drill, and part calisthenics, or an occasional game of ball or other contest.

BIOLOGY LAB.

As you look over the school campus, you can see pupils of the Biology Class out catching grasshoppers and honeybees. Along the creek banks they are catching frogs and crayfish. One of the members of the faculty has been kind enough to give the class one of his dogs for specimen. They also have a snake to work upon donated to them by one of the seniors. Members of the class recently received their dissecting tools, and are ready for the "carving." If anyone has a specimen to give to the class, it will be gratefully received, as Miss Nicholas wishes them to collect and "pickle" a large and widely assorted lot of specimens now, while they may be secured and kept for later dissection. Bring them in.

CLASS NEWS

The second year of school found the freshmen dodging the upper classes, but the inevitable always happens, and every freshman had his turn at the old and honored (?) custom of "initiation." The boys had their heads ducked in a nearby watering trough, while the girls were made to wear old and mismatched shoes. However, it hasn't seemed to injure them very seriously, and they are already rushed into organization, and have elected a president, Paul Moyer. The other officers have not been elected yet.

The sophomores are contemplating a party at this coming Friday night. Details later.

The juniors are all well and happy. The girls have "done themselves proud" in playground baseball, while the boys are well represented in football.

The senior boys are up to the minute with "Dame Fashion." Don Says says, "Suspenders are coming in again," and proves it by wearing them. The girls say, "If the boys wear suspenders, we are going to wear hair ribbons."

FOOTBALL

Beaver's football squad, under the skilled and efficient coaching of Supt. A. C. Ewbanks, is practicing daily for the first game, Friday, September 21, at Frankfort, Ohio. The boys are in good spirits, and are "all rarin' to go," so it looks like Beaver will have a very successful season. Quite a few veterans of the past three years are still with us, along with others of slightly less experience, while several new but promising "green sticks of timber" are being worked out daily. Full lineup will be furnished in the next issue, along with details of the Frankfort game. Watch for our next issue.

BEAVER FALL FAIR

The Beaver annual Fall Fair will be held October 18-19. Details later. As the K. of P.'s have kindly granted permission to use the second floor also, for part of the exhibits, we shall have far better accommodations and twice the usual amount of room to accommodate our large audience, which always assembles for this event. Tell your friends and neighbors of the dates, and watch this paper for later announcements of this fair. A. A. Neff, of the agricultural department in charge.

BEAVER HIGH NEWS STAFF
The Beaver High School News

Staff takes pleasure in presenting its first number of its regular weekly news bulletin. Organized at the suggestion of County Supt. H. C. Aultman, for the purpose of furnishing him Beaver's portion of the high school news items of the county, it hopes to render that service effectually and fully. Extra carbon copies of our news sheet will be posted upon the bulletin boards each Friday to all members of the high school to read. Watch the boards.

With your co-operation we can make our paper a full and complete digest of all that is interesting and worth while in high school news. A small cabinet will be placed in the hall next week for the "mailing" of news items to the editors. Do your bit! We cannot agree to use every item sent in, but shall use as much as we can. Mr. Smith, of the English department is official critic and censor of all news items going to print. We shall hope for a good list of contributions to "digest" next week.

The Beaver High School News Staff changes every six weeks period. The staff for the first six weeks consists of: Mary Haverstick, chief editor; Sarah Ferguson, Edward Shoup, Dorothy Lyons, and Thomas Blake, assistant editors. All the work of collecting and publishing our news is in the hands of the senior English class.

WICHITA IS TAKING LEAD AS COUNTRY'S LEADING AIR CITY

WICHITA, Kan., Sept. 22.—If there is one city in the United States that takes its flying seriously it is Wichita.

The aeronautical industry has been developed here beyond any expectations. Commerce figures—will manufacture approximately one third of the airplanes turned out in the United States this year. Six factories, one of them listed among the largest in the country, are busily turning out the latest model airplanes, unable to meet the demand despite improved production methods.

The six, in order to their size and output, are: Travel Air, 20 planes a week; Swallow Airplane company, seven; Cessna Aircraft Company, three; Swift Airplane Company, two planes produced to date with a projected production of one a week; and Laird Aircraft Company, one every two weeks. The Wichita factories produce all types of planes, except the giant tri-motor. Luxurious cabin monoplanes and biplanes, swift little two-seaters, air mail raft—all are manufactured here.

Incidentally, Wichita boasts the oldest commercial airplane company in the United States, the Swallow firm.

But the factories, important as they are, are only a part of the industry here. There are two motor companies; the Wichita Blue Streak Motor company, and the Quick Air Motors. The latter company has erected a factory, and production of five motors a day is scheduled. It will have an annual turnover of more than $4,000,000. A propeller company, transportation services, repair shop and flying schools also are centered here.

Wichita offers six landing fields: the municipal airport, the California section, soon to be made the city's landing field, Cessna field,

Swift field, Swallow field, and Stearman field.

A recent survey of the industry shows that today 841 men and women are employed in Wichita's airplane factories, as compared to only forty-two at the same time last year. That is exclusive of the numbers employed in other lines of the air business.

The Wichita Flying Club, the Wichita chapter of the National Aeronautic Association and the newly-organized Women's National

Aeronautic Association, have done much to bring this city to the front aeronautically, and have extensive plans for further development.

Another important phase of aeronautics in Wichita is the four-year intensive aeronautical course offered by the University of Wichita. Instructors are taken from the school's faculty, plane factories here, and from the army flying corps at Marshall Field, Fort Riley. The instruction offered covers every angle of the industry.

FARM BELT DAILIES CLAIM FARM RELIEF IS SOLVING ITSELF

Better Conditions To
Help Republicans Is
Belief

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—The problem of farm relief is being solved by agriculture itself and the assurance of relief will prove a boon to Republican campaign prospects, the bimonthly report of the corn belt farm dailies said today.

The farmers' problem, the report said, is being solved by the "barn lot" allies of the farmer, the steer, the sheep and the lamb. For these products, the market offers splendid returns.

For eight years, the report says, the farmer has supplied the nation with the cheapest food it ever purchased. Other things have been high, but by comparison food has been cheap. While legislative farm relief has been sought, the inexorable laws of economics have been at work, until at present the demand for food over-reaches the supply, and thus the farmer is in a position to receive a fair return.

The report states that "good profits are being made by those who have cattle, hogs, sheep, wool, dairy or poultry products to sell. These products are in moderate supply, relative to population and demand which explains the remunerative prices being received for them. Those who make a regular practice of marketing their rough feeds and the bulk of their grains through live stock are in a fortunate position. It is only those who depend regularly on selling their grain and those who are classed as in-and-outers in the live stock business who are not in a position to cash in to the best advantage."

The crop outlook for 1928 is excellent, according to the report, but it is predicted that there will be little surplus and that prices will be favorable.

Importance of a profitable season for farmers, as a political issue, is reviewed by the report. In that respect the party in power is favored to an extent no doubt fully offsetting whatever handicap may spring from its record on farm relief legislation. Furthermore, many farmers believe that American agriculture must have adequate protection against the invasion of cheap foods from foreign lands, and so are likely to lean toward the party that makes protection its boast. These two considerations will influence more farm votes than all other campaign issues put together, the corn belt papers report concludes.

CLEVELAND ENJOYS BUILDING BOOM

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 22.—Greater Cleveland is in the throes of a construction boom, according to figures of the municipal building department. Statistics indicate a genuine boom even without the added impetus of spring and fall dashes of construction, city officials said.

Building construction in Cleveland proper so far this year has reached a total valuation of $38,969,275, an increase of approximately $9,000,000 over the corresponding period for last year. The estimated total for the year is $60,000,000.

Comparison of 1927 and 1928 for the six major suburbs of Cleveland shows a total of $49,922,761 for this year and $39,831,143 for last year. Construction in 1928 for Cleveland and the suburbs will reach $76,000,000, it was estimated. Last year, it totaled $59,065,855.

Official figures show more construction now than at any time since many business failures tightened banking institutions, it was said, and this year promises a building program that will almost equal the banner years of 1923 and 1925, when tremendous activity prevailed.

GUADELOUPE DEATH TOLL REACHES 1,000

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The death toll from the hurricane in Guadeloupe, French West Indies, was far heavier than at first reported, the ministry of colonies announced today.

Deaths totaled 555 outside of Point a Pitre, the principal city, the announcement said, while it was expected the dead in Point a Pitre itself would exceed 300.

Deputy Caudace, representative of Guadeloupe in the French chamber, cabled that the death toll was 1,000 and the damage 600,000,000 francs ($23,400,000).

MURDER STORY TOLD BY YOUTH IN CALIFORNIA

Reveals How Child Was Murdered In Bed
With Axe

RIVERSIDE, Calif., Sept. 22.—The story of the purported murder of nine-year-old Walter Collins was made public for the first time today.

Sanford Clark, 19, after an all night police grilling, finally stated that he, Gordon Stewart Northcott and Gordon's mother, Mrs. Louise Northcott, grouped around Collins' bed and butchered the youth with an axe.

He said he and Northcott struck the boy with the blunt side of the instrument, and then Mrs. Northcott used the sharp side to complete the slaughter.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Sept. 22.—The state of California today took steps toward obtaining extradition of Gordon Stewart Northcott held at Vancouver, B. C., and his mother, Mrs. Louise Northcott, under arrest at Calgary, Alta.

The mother and son are under indictment by a Riverside, Calif., county grand jury, charged with the murder of four boys on the Riverside murder farm.

Governor C. C. Young wired the department of state at Washington asking that provisional detention of the pair be requested of Canadian authorities. Northcott has indicated he will fight the pending extradition proceedings.

SIDNEY SOLON IS SENTENCED TO PEN

SIDNEY, O., Sept. 22.—L. E. Souder, Shelby County's representative to the Ohio state legislature, faced a seven-year penitentiary term Saturday for forgery.

Souder, well known here as an attorney, was sentenced Friday by Judge J. D. Barnes following Souder's plea of guilty to the charges.

Souder was indicted this week by the Shelby County grand jury on a charge of forging a note to the Motor Inn Garage, Sidney, for $71.90.

In a statement to the court before sentence was passed, the prosecution brought out that the note was one of a series given by Souder with intent to defraud.

SECRETARY OF DETROIT MOVIE UNION HELD BY KIDNAPERS

DETROIT, Sept. 22.—With Max Ruben, 40, secretary of the Motion Picture Operators' Union still missing after being kidnaped Thursday night, Ray Gagnon, president of the union today said he had received a telephone threat and asked police protection for his union headquarters.

Inspector Henry J. Garvin of the crime and bomb squad disparaged reports that the union had a large "war fund," and that Ruben had been kidnaped for ransom.

Gagnon said he had received a threat over the telephone for reporting the kidnaping to police. Members of the "purple gang" who were questioned proved they had nothing to do with the kidnaping, Garvin declared.

SEVEN ENTRANTS IN AIRPLANE RACE ARE CONTINUING FLIGHT

Three Forced Down; Flyers
Hampered By Fog
And Wind.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Sept. 22.—Seven of the ten airplanes which started in the Los Angeles to Cincinnati class A air race lined up at Meacham Field here this morning for today's flight to Pine Bluff, Ark.

The take-off was scheduled for 10:30 a. m. It was expected the three entries which failed to arrive at this control last night yet might arrive in time for the start of today's lap.

Fog and high winds over west Texas hampered the flyers on yesterday's lap from El Paso. The fog over the Quilichu Mountain defeated Samuel H. Turner, Alexandria, Va., who landed his Berline monoplane at Pecos with only a few minutes gasoline supply left.

Engine trouble forced down W. H. Emery, Bradford, Pa., and H. W. Myers, Los Angeles. Emery landed his Traveler near Sweetwater. Myers brought his Simplex down east of Midland after it developed engine trouble.

Class B planes which spent the night at El Paso, Tex., were expected to arrive here at 11 a. m. today, continuing then to Pine Bluff, Ark., for the night control. According to present plans, both class A and B pilots will complete the race to Cincinnati together.

Robert Duke, Pittsburgh, who won second prize with his American Moth monoplane in the transcontinental race to Los Angeles, landed his flyer at Pecos yesterday. He went into first place in the race. He landed at 3:11:02 p. m.

The four entrants in the class B race will leave El Paso this morning and were expected to begin arriving here shortly after the seven class A planes depart.

Fog and rain appeared probably again today over the route through Texas.

STORCK'S PLANE IS WRECKED IN FRANCE

MARSEILLES, France, Sept. 22.—The tiny around-the-world seaplane of George H. Storck, Seattle flier, overturned today while leaving the Marguerite Basin at 10 a. m. for the east. Storck was unhurt but the plane was badly damaged.

Storck left London a week ago to fly eastward around the world. His small Avro seaplane was too heavily loaded and it buckled and broke in two at the moment it left the water. Watchers ashore went to the rescue in a motorboat and fished Storck out of the wreckage.

The plane carried more than the usual amount of fuel to permit a long flight across the Mediterranean.

PRESIDENT BACK IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—President Coolidge returned today from a two-day trip to Vermont, where he visited his boyhood home at Plymouth and inspected rehabilitation undergone by the state since the disastrous flood of 1927.

Mrs. Coolidge left the presidential party at Northampton, Mass., last night to remain at the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Lemira Goodhue, critically ill in a hospital here.

CURTIS ADOPTED BY CROW INDIANS

Arrangements were made for Chief Plenty Cows, venerable leader of the Crows, to adopt Curtis into the tribe before an assemblage of 5,000 natives representing Algonquian reservations.

A half dozen steers were roasted over charcoal pits for a feast in Curtis' honor this noon. The senator will be taken for a tour of the Crow reservation and points of historic interest nearby. He will make a brief address this afternoon and then motor to Billings for a banquet and political meeting tonight.

At the meeting attended by more than 1,200 persons last night at Sheridan, Wyo., Curtis promised a raise in tariff to protect stock and sheep raisers from competition with foreign producers, particularly Canadian.

SHERIFF SEEKS NEW MURDER SOLUTION AFTER JURY FAILS

Scent Mystery In Death
Of Young Wife At Ottawa

OTTAWA, O., Sept. 22.—When a coroner's inquest Friday, investigating the death of Mrs. Mary Himmler, 19, who was found dead Sept. 12, proved without results, Sheriff Clinton Felkey today set out in an effort to solve the mystery.

The jury was called Thursday after Sheriff Clinton Felkey had investigated the case from several angles in the search for convicting clues.

Mrs. Himmler's body was found in the Blanchard River by a neighbor two days after she had disappeared from the home of her father at East Gilboa. The body when found bore bruises about the head and was described as being due to a broken neck.

Following the inquest Friday afternoon in Gilboa, O., County Coroner Peter Sikel refused to give a verdict declaring he was satisfied a strange auto was driven to the Himmler home about the time the woman was thought to have been slain or met her death by accident.

Mrs. Idella Wolfe, grandmother of the girl-wife, testified that an automobile, whose owner she did not know, was driven toward the home of the girl Sept. 10, just before Mrs. Himmler disappeared.

Sheriff Felkey and Detective Ben Miller of Lima testified they thought the car was owned by Findlay, but inquiries there failed to reveal the owner.

William Drumm, the girl's father; J. E. Walker, newsboy who delivers papers to the Drumm home, and Oscar McCarney, a farmhand who lived at Drumm's, testified.

Felkey said it was his belief the death was accidental.

COLLEGES REPORT SEVERE TREMORS

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—An earthquake of several hours duration was recorded on the seismograph at Fordham University today.

Tremors began at 3:59 a. m. E. D. T. and reached their maximum at 4:24. Seismologists said the quake was 4,000 miles northwest of New York, probably in Siberia.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The seismograph at Georgetown University today recorded an earthquake estimated to be about 4,000 miles distant. The tremors began at 2:51 a. m. and reached their maximum at 2:33, and were described by Father Tondorf, director, as "very severe."

FEAR SLOT MACHINE OPERATOR HAS BEEN KILLED BY ENEMIES

Question Suspects In Disappearance Of Rack-
eteer

CLEVELAND, Sept. 22.—Fears that Nathan Weisenberg, "vending machine" distributor whose home was bombed yesterday, may have met the fate meted out in the past year to two others interested in the slot machine "racket" were felt today.

Weisenberg has not been heard from since he left his home at 9 p. m. Thursday to go to Buffalo. Business associates said he never was away twenty-four hours before without communicating with them.

Two men arrested in connection with the bombing were being questioned Saturday about Weisenberg's mysterious disappearance. Both of the men were questioned earlier this year when Lawrence Lupo, Weisenberg's friend and business associate, was murdered.

Lupo was the slayer of Ralph H. "Curly" Meyers, former deputy sheriff, and a slot machine agent. Lupo pleaded self defense, and Weisenberg, who witnessed the killing gave testimony that aided Lupo to win his freedom.

Weisenberg controlled a large number of what he has always designated as "vending machines." Demand was made that he pay from $4 to $6 a month to the racketeering "kings" for each machine.

He refused. Immediately afterward nineteen of his machines were stolen from persons to whom he had leased them. His associates said he appealed to a powerful political boss with the result that the thefts were halted.

Trucks used in the bold thefts were traced to the two "kings" who sought to black jack money out of the county's slot machine operators, it was said.

Since that time Weisenberg has expressed fears that an attempt would be made upon his life. He expected the attack to come when he drove into his garage at night.

When he left Thursday night he was carrying a large sum of money, and wore two diamonds, each of which were worth more than $2,000, his friends said.

PERSONALITIES IN CAMPAIGN SUBJECT OF BORAH WARNING

Liar s, Slanderers To Disappear After Election He Says

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., Sept. 22.—Personalities do not clarify issues nor enlighten voters, Senator William E. Borah, Republican of Idaho, warned in an address here last night. "Bitterness already, has entered the presidential campaign," Borah said.

There are important issues engaged in the campaign to engage all our time and our best thought, and our most unselfish patriotism, he said. "Let us discuss and consider them."

"When the shouting and the groaning die away about three o'clock in the morning of November 7, all liars and slanderers will disappear with it."

"You have tremendous interests in the campaign. The next four years of administration will profoundly affect your interests materially and morally. It will have to do with the happiness of our home, with the outlook of your children, with your economic health, it has your economic freedom. They will have tremendously to do with the business interests of the country, with its prosperity and with our continued progress as a people."

Senator Borah explained he was prompted to make his remarks by repeated questioning during the day about purely personal matters in the campaign.

Through testimony and documentary evidence, the commission this week developed a surveillance of the New Jersey legislature; close relations between Iowa colleges and utilities; and distribution to editors of a news service secretly paid for by the Alabama Power Company.

GOVERNOR INVADES COLORADO TO SPEAK ON WATER QUESTION

Boulder Dam Issue Will Be Discussed By Candidate.

ABOARD GOVERNOR SMITH'S SPECIAL TRAIN EN ROUTE TO DENVER, COLO., Sept. 22.—Governor Alfred E. Smith invaded Colorado today for his first discussion of water power, an issue he will emphasize strongly in his appeal for western votes, and on the more immediate mission of injecting renewed enthusiasm into Colorado Democrats by a personal appearance.

He picked Colorado for his third campaign speech because it is one of the seven states involved in one of the two major water power projects pending before congress—the Boulder dam project—and because Democrats believe their prospects in the state are usually good this year.

Their hopes are based upon factional troubles among Republicans the seriousness of which appeared several weeks ago when Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the Republican national committee, made a trip to the state, his home state, to smooth over the friction. It is the New York governor's second visit to Denver. His other visit was twenty years ago, when he attended the Democratic national convention in Denver in 1908.

At that time, Smith was a rising young member of the New York assembly.

The convention which he attended nominated for the third time William Jennings Bryan, who in 1924 was one of the leaders in opposing his nomination for president at Madison Square Garden.

FLORIDA TOLL OF DEAD REACHES 1,000

ANTI-SALOON BODY OPPOSES NOMINEE DUE TO CATHOLICITY

Urges Protestant Domination In Editorial

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 22.—The Ohio Anti-Saloon League was on record today as urging defeat of Governor Al Smith for president because he is a member of the Catholic Church.

Voters of Ohio, in an editorial in The American Issue, official organ of the league, are urged to vote for Herbert Hoover and against Smith if they "believe in Anglo-Saxon Protestant domination" and in "the maintenance of that civilization founded by our Puritan ancestors and preserved by our fathers."

The league has heretofore contended that it was opposed to Smith solely because of his attitude on prohibition and that his religion did not enter into the question.

Denouncing Smith as a candidate who "appeals to the sports, jazz and liberal element of our population," the editorial goes on to declare that "the Anglo-Saxon Protestants, working through both parties, have dominated America and made it what it is today."

Charles G. Smith "is inclined to open the gates to foreigners, with their liberal tendencies and un-American customs," it asserts that "this element will be found supporting him in the election." Senator Simon D. Fess, Republican candidate for long term as senator, made a similarly vicious attack on Smith at an organization meeting of Republican candidates and workers here Friday.

"We do not have a nominee for president for whom we must apologize," Fess said. "Our leader never felt called upon to deny that he was intoxicated and drove down Fifth Avenue at fifty miles an hour, or that he was drunk at a certain fair."

STRATON LAUNCHES ATTACK ON NOMINEE TO ANSWER CHARGES

Declares Governor Side-
Stepped All Real
Issues

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 22.—The hall in which Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, Democratic candidate for president, Thursday night bitterly indicted his opponents for an alleged "whispering campaign," last night echoed to a counter-attack by Dr. John Roach Straton, Baptist minister of the New York City Church.

"I have come to you tonight for a few more 'whisperings,'" the minister told his audience of several thousand persons. "I am here to whisper silyly to you tonight."

"Gov. Smith has run to cover from the assault upon his record," Straton continued. "He was instructed to ignore me."

"But how absurd is the position into which he has gotten himself. He cannot ignore Straton, and Bishop Canon, and William Allen White and Superintendent Miller of the New York City League, or others of us who really know his record."

The governor, Dr. Straton said, "completely side-stepped the real issues over his record as a public man, in his adroit speech."

The speaker called Gov. Smith the "political personality of Tammany," which he defined as an "organized political corruption," and launched into a defense of the entrance of ministers into political campaign discussions.

REPORT SHOWS XENIA CITY FINANCES GOOD

Bonded Debt Will Be Entirely Wiped Out In 1934; Condition Better Than In Most Cities.

Reflecting the financial stability of Xenia, a report prepared by City Auditor T. H. Zell dealing with the bonded indebtedness of the city indicates that unless additional bond issues are initiated in the mean time, Xenia will wipe out its debt in 1934.

Xenia can point with pride to a healthy financial condition because the present outstanding bonded debt is actually only $30,500, less than a great majority of the cities of the same size in the state.

The bonded debt in the General Fund, for which taxes are directly assessed, stands at $53,000, but the interest and sinking fund trustees have $22,500 credit to apply to the deficit, which leaves the actual net indebtedness only $30,500.

This figure, however, does not include sale of $11,000 worth of bonds by City Commission this week to finance purchase of a new fire truck.

Excluding this last bond issue, the last bond in the General Fund will be retired in 1934.

Bonds now outstanding and the year they fall due are as follows: $12,000, due in 1933, issued for fire department building; $1,000, due in 1934, for the truck; $24,000, due in 1934, and $1,500, due in 1931, for sewerage disposal plant; $5,000, due in 1930, and $6,000, due in 1930, city's portion of paving W. Main St. and other streets; $3,500, due in 1931, city's portion of paving E. Church St.

The special assessment bonded debt for streets and sewers, paid for by citizens directly benefited by the improvements, amount to $107,650. Providing no new obligations are incurred meanwhile, this debt will be wiped out and the last bond retired in 1936.

The utility or municipal waterworks debt, which is paid off each year out of the earnings of the plant, has been reduced to $282,900. The plant will be entirely free from debt in 1951 when the last bond is retired.

HAVE ADVANTAGE—Ohio potato growers, during the past 10 years, have been receiving more than 25 cents a bushel more than the average price for the United States, it appears through statistics arranged by Charles W. Hauke of the rural economics department of the Ohio State University. The average premium of the Ohio grower during the decade, has been twenty-eight cents a bushel over the price for the United States as a whole, and from nine to fifty cents a bushel over the prices received by the growers in the adjoining states of Michigan, Pennsylvania, and New York.

In 1921 this premium went up to forty-five cents a bushel over the price for the United States. In 1925 it dropped to thirteen cents, but in each year of the ten there has been a premium.

Nearly, adequate markets, which could be reached quickly and with small transportation costs have been responsible for the premium not distributed by the public, nor extra high quality of Ohio potatoes. Jobbing prices on city markets have shown no such premium for potatoes grown in this state. Ohio potatoes cannot claim any higher quality than those grown in adjoining states.

But because the location of the Ohio farmer in relation to his markets is advantageous, and because of the better conditions among the potato production of the state has been less than the potato consumption, the price at the farm, which means more to the producer than does the price on the city market, has remained consistently high.

Industrial centers within short distances from Ohio farmers have given the Ohio potato grower his advantage. The consuming population is large and the producing population is small in proportion to it. Only about one half enough potatoes have been produced in Ohio in the past ten years to supply the demand within the state. The average production in the United States in that time was 3.5 bushels per capita, and the average Ohio production was only 1.7 bushels per capita.

Since most of the crop is sold and consumed near where it is grown, the transportation cost has been small, and the margin left for the producer has been larger than in states where the only available market was at a long distance.

PAYROLL INCREASE NOTED IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Sept. 22.—Widespread increase in payrolls during last month as compared with the preceding month in the manufacturing and business firms of Cleveland was revealed in a statement by Allard Smith, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

The payrolls of sixty-six manufacturing and commercial houses showed an increase of 15 per cent in dollars paid for August over July and an increase of 18 per cent for August as compared with the mark of a year ago, Smith said.

"As the total volume of these payrolls runs into several millions of dollars monthly, this is an indication of the industrial and business progress of the city as well as of the better conditions among the people who receive the wages," he said.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE BETTER DAYS—Say not thou, What is the cause that former days were better than these? For thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this.—Ecc. 7:10.

HOW CANADA "SOLVED" THE PROBLEM

"Prohibition is a failure; Canada has what we want." So say some of the leaders who would modify the liquor laws. But just what are the facts about Canada?

Here are a few of them:

The Liquor Board of the Province of Ontario reports sales amounting to $1,000,000 a week. The Board of the Province of Alberta announces that in the second year of "control" 4,000,000 gallons of intoxicants were sold there. The seven provincial liquor control boards for a Canadian territory of 10,000,000 inhabitants report a united liquor expenditure of $160,000,000—$16 per inhabitant per year!

Does this mean that the Canadians are drinking beer instead of hard liquor? The reports of these same boards of control show that hard liquor sales have increased 33 per cent in two years. Even more, they show that they have increased 50 per cent since beer parlors were opened.

The first year that this system was used in the Province of Alberta, 60,000 permits were issued. Two years later, 144,300 permits were issued.

How about drunkenness in Canada? According to the Montreal Star, since the government has gone into the liquor business, drunkenness among women has increased 53 per cent. Police Commissioner Burton, of Manitoba, says "if all the drunks were arrested there would be no room for them in the jails." The Saskatchewan Liquor Board announces that "arrests for drunkenness increased 125 per cent in the first eight months of government control."

But it may be argued that the Canadian plan would get rid of bootleggers. Listen to what the Alberta Liquor Board has to say: "Our greatest problem is moonshine in the country districts." The Saskatchewan authorities declare that "as much liquor is sold by bootleggers as is sold in the government stores." And in British Columbia, arrests for bootlegging went up 111 per cent the first year of so-called government control.

MAKING A "BABY" OF GROWN SON

Chester T. Crowell, widely known writer, believes that hundreds of thousands of American parents are doing both themselves and their children an injustice by sacrificing to send the children to college. A boy, he contends, who is allowed to grow to manhood dependent on his father's checkbook for his livelihood and pleasures is inevitably handicapped when he must face the world for himself.

"Our present system of education is making a slave of papa, and it is well calculated to make a baby of son," he writes in McClure's magazine. "If a boy goes about the business of self-education with intelligence and determination he will achieve vastly more than four years of college life ordinarily gives."

If a boy really wants a college education he will get it whether his dad pays the bill or not. If he doesn't want it that bad it is usually a waste of time and money to give it to him.

You can't uplift people by sitting down on them.

SATURDAY AFTERNOONS

Saturday afternoon represents an opportunity that few take advantage of. Of course a great many THINK they take advantage of Saturday afternoon—but do they? They use it more and more as the beginning of a week-end holiday. Or, in case of some, it is well along on a week-end holiday which began on Friday. More and more Americans are coming to the British idea of a long week-end. But the real opportunity of Saturday afternoon is for work. Most people are doing something else. They are out of the way. Few come into the office to interrupt and to trouble. More work can be done comfortably and easily on Saturday afternoon than on any full day of the week. This is a useless paragraph. Nobody will try it.

CIRCUS MEN

Who have contributed more to clean fun and a good time in this more or less sad world than the circus men? The famous ones have gone or are passing on. Barnum is dead, and so is Bailey. One Ringling is left. John G. Robinson, who founded Robinson's circus, has passed away, and now his son, "Gil" Robinson, well-known showman and author of circus history, is dead.

The old showmen did a lot for human happiness. It is fortunate that there are those left who still carry on the big top.

"SHOW BOAT"

This is not an advertising column but the writer would be falling down on a good turn if he didn't advise tourists to New York to see what is perhaps the best musical comedy ever made—"Show Boat." It is a dramatization of Edna Ferber's novel. This show is clean—and it has everything. It has comedy, high, middle and low, and it has pathos. It has plot and it has music. If you work Saturday afternoon—as per advice in the first article in this column—you have a right to see "Show Boat" on Saturday night.

WEEDS

Henry Ford predicts automobile tires made out of common, roadside weeds, and motor cars fueled with alcohol. He is probably right. Edison has discovered that some sort of rubber can be made from almost every weed that grows. Oleander plants seem the best producers. No need worry about shortage of gasoline. Alcohol can run motor cars, and alcohol can be made of almost any vegetable matter.

The value of Ford is not altogether as a manufacturer but as a man who can keep the people thinking about new things.

The Diary

of a

New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK—An American woman, landing from Paris, declared 325 chemises as part of her personal wardrobe. The wardrobe was contained in 25 trunks in charge of two maids. However, such a case is extraordinary, even among the wealthy. Persons are traveling lighter now than they used to, a steamship pier head porter tells me. Many men now go aboard with one bag, and no more clothes than they would take on a trip to Chicago, and women travel as lightly, because of the scantiness of their attire.

A. H. Woods, the stage producer, recently deliberately went aboard a liner for London with a brief case and nothing else. He didn't want to be bothered with baggage. He wasn't inconvenienced, for the large boats have grades of shops in which everything, including clothing, but excluding row boats, is sold.

The old-time average traveler used to have two or three trunks on a voyage to Europe.

Some more of the numerous queries directed at the columnist by readers in the provinces:

Who were the original couple in "Abie's Irish Rose?"

What is the address of Otto H. Kahn?

I would like information in regard to Tammany Hall. In what way is it worse than most men's clubs?

Where in New York can I sell a six-shilling piece dated 1757? Please give me Mr. George M. Cohan's address?

(1571 Broadway, New York City.)

Is there a hotel in New York exclusively for women?

(Yes, the Martha Washington hotel.)

Are there any factories in New York or is the city all houses and shops?

Is Texas Guinan's hair really red?

(Tex says that at present it is.)

What is the relative size of New York and London?

(The 191 "registration area" population of London was only 4,482,249. But allowing for the "outer ring," the population was 7,476,168. The 1920 population of the five boroughs which comprise New York City was in excess of 5,600,000 and is now nearly 6,000,000. Incidentally, all such facts are in almanacs, year books, encyclopedias, etc., available in all libraries, book-shops, etc.)

The slave anklet fad has lasted longer than I thought it would. Women are still wearing them. However, a jeweler tells me that he frequently has orders from customers to change the engraved initials on the anklets. He estimates that about half of all the buyers of slave anklets eventually have them changed.

"Only a woman that was funny about love would wear one," he remarked skeptically.

MENU HINT

Broiled Lamb Chop
Potato Souffle
Tomatoes Stuffed with Cucumbers
Custard Coffee

The menu today is planned for three people. Lamb chops are not very large, and it is generally necessary to provide two chops for each person. You know your own family appetite, however, so can order accordingly.

Today's Recipes

Potato Souffle—To two cups of cold mashed potatoes add half a cup of milk, salt, pinch of salt, a tablespoon of butter, two tablespoons of flour and two eggs, beaten very light, as the souffle depends on this for its spongy quality. Now, mix all the ingredients together until very light. Put in a pudding dish, spread a little butter over the top and bake until brown.

Tomatoes Stuffed with Cucumbers—Chop the cucumber, add a little green pepper and onion, add to the pulp of the tomato which you have scooped out, stuff tomatoes and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Suggestions
To Clean Silver

The "salvage process" rather than rubbing with silver polish is more effective in cleaning sterling silver. The silver should be placed in an aluminum pan in which there is boiling water sufficient to cover, with salt and soda in the proportion of one teaspoonful of each to a quart of water. After taking the silver out of the solution wash it in warm water and soap suds, rinse in clear water and rub off with a bit of chamols or polishing cloth. However, this process should be used only for "bright" sterling, as it removes all oxide, and articles with a gray or oxidized finish cannot be given this treatment without brightening the finish, or rather removing it.

THE GREAT HUMAN PUZZLE

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

COMMON SENSE AND EXERCISE

All of us know that it is necessary to exercise. We have no chance of escaping that knowledge. There are books written about it, lectures dedicated to the subject, and if you read this column regularly, you will admit that rarely a week passes that I do not stress upon the importance of regular exercise.

However, like all other necessary and essential things, sometimes it is easier to talk about than to do. Our lives, nevertheless, are so constituted that it is quite possible for every one of us to work out a plan of exercise without letting it in any way interfere with what we are doing.

Let us say, for instance, that you are a housewife. I take this example first, because I think that housewives, as a general thing, inclined to believe themselves too busy to exercise. They are not. To be sure, electrical appliances have, I know, minimized the actual amount of physical work there is in a house. Sweeping, probably one of the best all-around exercises, has become an almost obsolete practice since the vacuum cleaner has come in. The bending and stooping, which is so perfect a thing for the body, is hardly done any more. We have electrical polishers, electrical dusters and electrical carpet beaters, so what is a lady to do to obtain that necessary amount of physical action?

Well, in the first place, she can dispense with one of these electrical aides every day. I don't advocate at all that you use a broom in place of a vacuum cleaner. It is not anywhere near so sanitary, and it is foolish to give yourself too much unnecessary work. But suppose that instead of depending on a feather duster, you buy a length of cheesecloth and dust with this. You will find that the under legs of the piano and tables will require the use of many muscles that you have almost forgotten you had—waist muscles and clapping and back muscles!

Then try to remember everything you do to maintain an erect and graceful posture. Instead of bending over the dishpan, elevate it and wash your dishes standing very, very straight. Instead of bending over your tables while preparing vegetables, sit down, but sit correctly.

Go in for gardening. There is no better exercise. Stop using your telephone to order your groceries, and walk to and from the markets. Even carrying some of the things home will help you to utilize the arm muscles which, after all, were made for utility purposes.

For the younger girls among you, try walking part way to the office. Choose a lunch place a little out of the beaten track, and take ten minutes of your lunch hour to walk there briskly. It will do you far more good than sitting in a hot, stuffy room chattering while waiting for your order.

Go in for sports. Tennis and golf are most attractive, and once you have become a fan, you will refuse to permit anything to come between you and your regular exercise—recreation.

Do not go in for too strenuous exercise. While it is quite true that women are historically famous for marvelous feats of physical strength, we must remember always that they were the product of generations of untrammeled physical health. The modern girl has no such record behind her. Her mother and her grandmother did much to weaken their splendid bodies with tight and incorrect corsets, and we, as a consequence, are suffering from the effects of the weekend abdominal muscles which result from this fashion, even unto the third generation!

Diet and Health

HOW WOMAN SHOP WORKER CAN REDUCE HER WEIGHT

"In all your writings on reducing, I never have seen anything on how factory workers can reduce. Believe me, it is a very real problem. Any woman who stays at home can reduce, but how about the one who has to take a lunch, usually sandwiches? I eat fruit myself, but hardly anyone else has will power to eat only fruit after five hours of work."

"I can reduce, but my problem is how to stay reduced. I drink a glass of chocolate malted milk before I go to work, eating either grapes or apples for lunch, and for supper a can of peas, some meat and some zucchini crackers or something like that. It answers the purpose and I feel fine, but I am getting mortally tired of it. I probably walk ten miles a day in my work and if there is a muscle in my body that doesn't get plenty of exercise, I don't know where it is. Please discuss the factory girl who wants to reduce. I'm sure you will have the gratitude of hundreds."

First I want to tell you, M., that it is harder for the woman who says at home and is around food to reduce than it is for the one who is out! My point of view:

Naturally, a physical worker can have many more calories while reducing than one who does sedentary work, but the question of reducing is exactly the same—just limiting the number of calories so that some of the energy will be supplied by the body fat.

You take a chocolate malted milk for breakfast. That probably contains 200 C. In chocolate syrup, 100 in malted milk powder and 150 in milk, in all, 450 calories. I think it would be better for you to have solid food; it would stay with you longer. You could have quite a bit for 450 calories.

For lunch you would have 200 C. of fruit, a sandwich made of two slices of bread, one-quarter of an inch thick (50 C. each),

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

"It isn't so important what you say," declares a friend who writes advertisements, "as how often you say it. What I mean is that repetition even of a silly slogan will drive the name of your product into people's minds. Indeed, I doubt if any slogan could be so foolish that it wouldn't be better than none. I just thought of a line that might be used to advertise a new brand of talcum powder. I have no doubt that if it were repeated often enough it would make that brand a household word."

Here is the slogan he suggests: "WILL NOT EXPLODE IN THE FACE."

With your work, you ought to reduce on 1,500 or 1,600 C. a day, so that would leave you 500 to 700 C. for supper. But I wouldn't take a whole can of peas, M., every day. Vary them with greens and other vegetables and vary your supper in other ways. Three-quarters of a cup of peas is 100 C.

I'll give you the foundation for the reducing diet which we all should have to get the needed elements. Then you fit it in to your regime.

Daily Foundation Diet.

FIRST: At least a half pound of some watery vegetables (the green leaf vegetables are especially good)—lettuce, spinach, celery, asparagus, watercress, beet tops, greens, cabbage, tomatoes, etc. A half pound of these, cooked or uncooked, without fat, approximately 50 C.

SECOND: A half pound of other vegetables—Carrots, beets, onions, parsnips and squash—approximately 100 C. without fat.

THIRD: 200 to 300 C. of fruit. Good sized orange, apple, pear—100 C. each. Best to take large share of the vegetables and fruits raw.

FOURTH: At least one pint of skim or buttermilk in some form—drinks, in cooking, or cheese. You need it for lime and complete protein.

FIFTH: One medium small potato, 100 C. OR one large slice whole wheat bread, one-half inch thick, same number of calories, OR two-thirds cup of cereal. If you have starchy or sugary desserts, omit these.

SIXTH: One to two teaspoonfuls cod liver oil (35 C. each), or two to four cod liver oil tablets (practically no calories), or one tablespoonful butter (100 C.) or equivalent in cream—for your supply of vitamin A.

SEVENTH: Protein. You must have more protein, besides what you get in the milk, so take three to four ounces of very lean meat or fish or eggs (150 to 200 C. total).

What I have outlined comes approximately to 800-1,000 C. That will leave you quite a few more calories for the things you like. But I advise you not to take sweets and fats because it is best to learn not to care for them. Arrange your meals and menus to suit yourself.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

NEW YORK—Alfred E. Smith's election, by itself, so they tell us, will not make this country one bit wetter.

No, not by itself.

It will be a step in that direction, however—if Al is elected. After which the "big men" behind his candidacy intend to proceed with the other steps. They know, as well as anybody knows, that the president cannot change the law. They are not putting up three or four or five millions of dollars to take just one step which they are fully aware will not be as far as they want to travel.

There are several steps to be taken. This merely happens to be the first one.

Of course it is no new discovery that Smith is the wet candidate—not necessarily exclusively wet, but wet, among other things.

The "big men" behind him are pretty nearly exclusively wet. To be sure, I cannot prove this, but it is my impression, amounting to a certainty, after basking for a week in the New York atmosphere and listening to the conversation.

Some very powerful moguls have grown exceedingly sick of prohibition in the last four years. Their pockets have been frisked. Their yachts have been fired on.

Their patience finally blew up with a bang.

A few of them simply said, "By heck! this has gone far enough. We propose to put up whatever amount of money may be necessary to stop it."

To begin with they needed a good presidential candidate.

He must be a wet, but he must have other qualifications. All the other qualifications, in the world would not have made a dry acceptable to them. Nevertheless, as mighty important folk, with a huge stake in having a high-class tenant in the White House, it was out of the question for them to endorse any cheap politician, merely for his wetness.

Smith was almost made to order for the purpose.

He is honest and able. He is wet. He suits big business and New York, at any rate. He is a great vote-puller. Whether or not he can win remains to be seen, but if he cannot it is hard to think of anybody else who could, on the same ticket.

If it had not been for the wet and-dry consideration, most of Smith's "big business" supporters certainly would have lined up behind Hoover, being Republican by habit.

There is nothing about Hoover to terrify a business man.

Smith, however, by what he said, made it possible for "big business" to feel safe in voting for him, too. Some notable wets dropped accordingly, evidently considering him at least as satisfactory as Hoover on business grounds, and more so on account of his wetness.

The point I make is that the bulk of Smith's really formidable financial backing obviously is wet backing—its main interest, in this campaign, is prohibition modification.

Now, does it stand to reason that these hard-boiled old days are ready to spend up into the millions to elect a wet to the White House and leave him there, tied hand and foot with a dry law that he cannot alter—having entirely failed to accomplish what they are fighting now to accomplish? Certainly not!

The next thing will be to get busy on congress.

And the out that can elect a president can throw a awful scare into a good many senators and representatives.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Should Girl Sacrifice Lover To Stay Home With Mother?

For a young person to make, it seems to me, is that of giving up his or her plans of marriage and a home of their own, to stay with the "old folks." Girls are more likely to be called on to make this sacrifice than men, and it always seems unfair to me. I wonder how many lonely women could tell the same story—an impatient young lover who refuses to wait an indefinite number of years for "something to turn up" to release the girl they love and allow her to marry. Then when she is a middle-aged or elderly woman, she is left to eat her heart out in loneliness. Often the sacrifice is needless, if the parents could only consider it so, and plan accordingly, even if it involved considerable sacrifice on their part.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl of 25 years and have been going with a fellow four years. If I don't get married at Christmas time he is going away and will never come back. My mother isn't well and I am the only girl and think my place is at home with her, but he can't see it that way. I love him very much, and sometimes I think I cannot live without him."

I worried about mother, but I worried more about losing my friend. What would you do if you were me? I will be waiting to hear your reply. BEE-LINE.

I would talk the matter over with mother and see if arrangements cannot be made for one else to stay with her if she has to have some one. Your lover has been faithful for four years and I don't think you should ask him to wait any longer unless it is absolutely necessary. It may be that you are sacrificing yourself needlessly. If your mother or really loves you she will want your happiness more than all else, and will be willing to do everything she can to further it.

FOR BREAD AND BUTTER

Herewith the whole of an affectionate letter written after the lapse of a week by a boy in camp who, the old folks feared, might be suffering from homesickness:

"Dear Dad: This is one of the rest periods when you are supposed to rest and write letters home. This is one of the letters. I would probably not have written so soon, but to get into the dining room tonight I have to have written a letter home. It is about dinner time, now, so must close. Your son, Bill."

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

THE WARNING THAT WASN'T HEEDED

"That relieves my mind a little," remarked Albatross, with a sigh, upon overhearing the sailor's scheme. "At least neither of my cousins is to suffer a worse fate than being taken captive and, after all, I don't know that it would be so bad to fall into the hands of those sailors. They seem to be a good-hearted lot and doubtless with them one would get enough to eat. But I shall warn the boys, anyhow—they ought to know what is going on."

"Hello! There comes a Two-Legs with a rope; and look, he is fastening the blubber over the end of it. Now he is making ready to throw the line over the ship's side. If I don't hurry it will be too late. I know those cousins of mine, we ought to be sure that they grab it."

"I am off, Cormorant! should not feel a bit comfortable if I didn't warn the boys of the hook that is hiding in that piece of fat. My cousins, foolish things, will think, 'Of course, that is a clever morsel of fish, as I should, too, if I was down there. Perhaps they will not believe me when I tell them the trick that the sailors are trying to play on them, but at any rate

I shall have done my duty. S'long!"

"Without another word Albatross flew down to join his cousins and Cormorant saw him talking to them very earnestly. But evidently, just as he feared, they didn't believe word of what he was saying. "Suddenly the sailor cast his line over the ship. Brushing past the Albatross who was trying so hard to warn them the two white birds made a dash for the blubber and snapped at it with beaks wide open."

"THE TWO BIRDS MADE A DASH FOR THE BLUBBER WITH BEAKS WIDE OPEN."

"Both missed the first time, but they had no intention of letting the tempting tidbit get away from them. Pumping into each other in their greedy haste the made a second try and this time the smaller of the two was successful."

"Snap!" went his beak and dainty morsel was within his mouth but so, too, alas, was the hook."

Next—"A Bird Who Got Left."

Central Gridders Prepare For Opening Game

VASHINGTON FIRST OPPONENT OF SEASON; IS ANCIENT ENEMY

Long Athletic Relations Give Fayette County Team One-Victory Edge; Has Never Beaten Kolb-Coached Eleven.

THE new blood and enthusiasm injected into the squad this year, Xenia Central High School will put the finishing touches next week on its preparation for the inaugural game of the season with Washington C. H. on the latter's gridiron.

Gridiron rivalry between the two schools dates back at least to 1911. Over this long period, Washington holds a slight edge over the Blue and White in the matter of victories.

In eighteen games played, Xenia has won eight times, Washington nine times while one contest ended in a scoreless tie.

During this length of time, Washington has piled up a total of 201 points to 145 for Xenia.

Central, consequently, needs a victory over its traditional rival next Friday afternoon to even the seven-year-old feud.

Incidentally, beginning with the regime of Coach Victor Kolb, Central has won its last three games with Washington, winning in 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, and in 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934.

With the squad brim full of confidence, hopes are entertained of bettering the 1927 record when three games were won, three lost and three ended in a scoreless tie.

Following is the Xenia-Washington C. H. football record since 1911:

1911—Xenia, 0; Washington, 0.	1912—Xenia, 16; Washington, 0.
1913—Xenia, 0; Washington, 13.	1914—Xenia, 0; Washington, 13.
1915—Xenia, 0; Washington, 13.	1916—Xenia, 7; Washington, 49.
1917—Xenia, 0; Washington, 33.	1918—Xenia, 0; Washington, 14.
1919—Xenia, 0; Washington, 13.	1920—Xenia, 0; Washington, 13.
1921—Xenia, 27; Washington, 0.	1922—Xenia, 17; Washington, 6.
1923—Xenia, 0; Washington, 6.	1924—Xenia, 7; Washington, 27.
1925—Xenia, 13; Washington, 7.	1926—Xenia, 7; Washington, 0.
1927—Xenia, 14; Washington, 6.	1928—Xenia, 14; Washington, 6.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The football season officially opens a week from today. One hundred and seventy-five games, including two double-headers, are scheduled next Saturday.

Princeton, Harvard, and Yale—once the mighty triumvirate of the east, but now just three other football teams—have three of the few eleven that do not swing into action next week.

A. A. Stagg, one of the nation's oldest coaches, will send the Chicago Maroons against two foes, Ripon and South Carolina, a week hence. Occidental on the Pacific Coast also has two games for Saturday—a week, with Pasadena, Junior, and San Bernardino, Junior. No eastern team as yet has summoned the courage to take on two teams in one afternoon.

The five best football teams in the east last year were Yale, Army, Princeton, Dartmouth and Pittsburgh. Yale had perhaps the best record of the quarter, losing only to Georgia in an early season game. Pittsburgh was a close second and Army, Princeton and Dartmouth were just a step behind Yale and Pittsburgh.

All five ought to have good teams again this year, but the east's best team may not come from that group. Pennsylvania, Navy, Harvard, New York University and others have prospects, equally as bright.

Grid Captains

ARTHUR E. FRENCH
HARVARD

Arthur E. French, broad jumper, sprinter and halfback, is captain of the Harvard football team this fall. He has played in the Harvard backfield for the last two years, and has shown himself to be a runner of the shift type. He is at his best in an open field, where his twisting and dodging count to the best advantage.

When Coach Arnold Horween was hard pressed for a quarterback last fall, French was tried at the position. But it was soon found that his value was much greater at half.

French first starred at football around Boston. He played in the backfield for Worcester academy.

In his first year at Harvard he was elected captain of the frosh eleven. He is 21, stands six feet in height, and weighs about 180 pounds.

EXPOSE FRAUD IN AUTOMOBILE TIRES

VAN WERT, O., Sept. 22.—Van Wert officials, in arresting Joseph Romero, New York, on charges of misrepresenting merchandise, believed that had brought to light a nationwide swindle in the sale of tires. The "ring," it was believed, operated in a number of states.

Authorities said Romero represented his merchandise as the product of a nationally known tire company while in reality they were discarded tires re-vulcanized and encased in paper wrappers.

The nationwide activity of tire swindling has prompted representatives of leading rubber companies to make a search throughout the country for men engaged in similar practices.

Now that Rickard has remembered for them, Knute may soon be clipping ears and coupons at the same time.

PRACTICE AGAIN

The Lang Chevrolet independent football team, gradually rounding into form for the fall campaign, will hold another practice at Cincinnati Ave. Park Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

The following players are requested to be there without fail: Leopold, F. Smith, Halder, Davis, McCoy, Hook, Finlay, Perrine, Seall, Jordan, Chitty, Anderson, D. Fuller, Bales, Beals, Hoag, Smith, Murphy and any others not mentioned wanting to play football.

FOUND NOT GUILTY

Shepherd had pleaded not guilty and a hearing was held several days ago.

FORMER XENIANS IN BIBLICAL DRAMA TO BE PRESENTED HERE

Frank Lott and Robert Collins, both former Xenians, will take part in sketches from the Biblical drama, "John the Baptist," which will be portrayed at the union church service at Central High school auditorium Sunday evening.

The sketches from the drama will be preceded by a devotional worship period, led by Xenia ministers.

Mrs. Irene Stone, writer and dramatic teacher, will give a short address on "Bible Drama and Young People." Professor Merrill Stone will outline the proposed school of Bible dramas for Xenia. Places will be reserved in the auditorium for young people of the various churches. "This is distinctly a young people's service to which the older people are also urged to attend," according to Mr. Stone.

"The Xenia Ministerial Association expects to determine the extent of the interest in this new departure of church activity for young people, which is both enjoyable and helpful," a local minister said Saturday. "And I hope that every church in Xenia will see that its young people attend this service, which will be unusually interesting."

BOXWELL ENROLLS AT WILMINGTON

Paul Boxwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Boxwell, N. Galloway St., one of the most outstanding athletes ever developed at Xenia Central High School, has enrolled at Wilmington College and is expected to break into the lineup against the Division "A" eleven of Antioch College in the opening football game for both schools at Wilmington Saturday afternoon.

Boxwell starred in both football and basketball at Central High and was one of the mainstays of the school in both sports for several successive years. Upon graduation he attended Ohio State University for two terms.

In entering Wilmington College this week Boxwell will probably be in his third year. He practiced with the college football squad and was expected to play a halfback position against Antioch Saturday.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—In 1775 the well-stocked American drug store carried approximately 675 different items, and all were either remedies or articles confined to the medical field. Today you can walk into the average drug store and buy any of 7,000 articles ranging from eyeglasses through fishing tackle and books to radio sets.

Dr. Logan Clendenning, the medical writer, has set out to find the answer and he believes that the humble postage stamp was the germ of it all. The public found it needed postage stamps at all hours, he pointed out—and only the drug store was open.

A number of factors have influenced the development of the pharmacy into a general store," writes Dr. Clendenning in the current issue of The American Druggist. "The most important undoubtedly was the long hours which the druggist was under obligation to keep. All the other stores shut at, say, 6 o'clock, but he had to keep open because people might need medicine at any hour.

"As the drug store was open when other shops were closed, people got the habit of dropping in at all hours to ask for this article and that—especially stamps. What was more natural or inevitable than that the store should gradually put in a supply of the articles asked for?"

"The stamp question is really the crux of the whole development. The time was when druggists waited bitterly upon them in the matter of stamp purchases. Nothing could have been more short-sighted."

The World And All IN THE AIR

There have been some bad airplane crashes lately. A crash is always news, not only because the attendant deaths are important, but also because airplane crashes are still invested with the element of novelty, and therefore are essentially news material. The newspapers do well in printing news items about every airplane smash-up in which lives are lost. But I hope readers do not conclude from these accounts that the person who takes to the air in a plane is as good as dead when he leaves the ground.

Great Britain is establishing air lines to all parts of the Empire. Next year a regular passenger-and-mail line will be running from London to Delhi, India. A Cape-to-Cairo air line will be started, too. A modern airport is being constructed near Alexandria, Egypt, for the London-Egypt service.

British planes carried more than three thousand passengers across the Channel to France in one month, and the cross-Channel service is proving very profitable from a commercial standpoint.

The British Empire has been facing a ticklish problem for a number of years. Especially since the war, the far-flung dominions and colonies that make possible the wealthy civilization of England have been feeling their individuality and power, and have discovered that they do not need to lean upon the mother country, but rather that the mother country is all the while leaning upon them.

So, one incident has succeeded another, and the wise government in London has acknowledged the virtual separate nationality of the dominions and other important units in the Empire. Some important Englishmen have spoken of the breakup of the Empire as an accomplished fact, and others have viewed it as an approaching event.

Contact between London and the dominion capitals by airplane routes and regular service will tend to preserve the Empire. That's plain as the sun at noon on a cloudless day. Hence the farsighted wisdom of the London air policy.

As for the United States, there is a lesson to be learned. Closer contact between American cities and South American cities might tend to undo any damage that our diplomats may unhappily accomplish from time to time. We ought to have regular mail and passenger air service between mainland United States and Hawaii, Porto Rico, Alaska, Panama, Mexico City, and several South American capitals and ports.

The Little Yellow House

By BEATRICE BURTON -- RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. © 1928

READ THIS FIRST: Shut within the doors of every home there is the warm and glowing story of a mother's incomparable love. Mrs. Milburn had come to the Little Yellow House, on Flower Street, owned by Uncle Sam Parks, twenty-five years before, when she and Charlie Milburn were married. Through all these years they had only known poverty, Mrs. Milburn had kept everything neat and looked after her three children, Emmy, eighteen; Dan, thirteen, and Perry, twenty-one. While the little yellow house, on the ugly street near the mill, was now sooty and begrimed, it had never lost its charm, or Mrs. Milburn, the story opens on Mrs. Milburn's birthday, grandmother Pentland, who had never approved of Mrs. Milburn's marriage to Charlie, has arrived. Grandmother urges Mrs. Milburn to accept fifty dollars as a present from her to pay the long overdue rent. Grandmother takes the opportunity of again scolding about the shiftlessness of Charlie Milburn. Mrs. Milburn finally takes the money. As grandmother is leaving she asks Emmy to take her out to her car.

Grandmother warns Emmy to pay no attention to Robb Hollis, young mill worker, who is in love with Emmy. Emmy wants a "white collar" man and Robb wears working clothes. In a moment of depression, Emmy decides that she is not going to spend her days in the little old house. She wants something new.

Emmy has brought home a pair of white gloves for a birthday present to her mother, Perry, the son, arrives home with a new lamp for his mother.

Early in the evening Charlie Milburn arrives home in a taxicab. He is intoxicated, as usual, but Mrs. Milburn always tells the children he is ill. Charlie has no money to pay his taxi bill and Mrs. Milburn takes the fifty dollar bill, which she had intended to use for paying the rent.

CHAPTER V Emmy ran up to her mother's room and came down with Grandmother Pentland's birthday present in her hands.

"I hate to give him this. It's a fifty-dollar bill. Do you suppose he can change it?" Mrs. Milburn asked, her doubting eyes fixed on the taxi driver waiting at the foot of the steps.

"If he hasn't change, he can get it," said Mrs. Milburn easily, with a wide sweep of his hand.

"Yes, but I'd hate him to lose it. It's the rent money. Mother gave it to me this afternoon for Uncle Bill."

"What's she giving you rent money for, I'd like to know?" Mrs. Milburn asked angrily.

Mrs. Milburn stepped out into the night with the bill in her hand. Her husband followed her, and stood swaying on the threshold.

"Why should we keep on paying rent, anyway?" he asked loudly and belligerently. "We've been paying it for the last twenty-five years haven't we? We've bought this shack six times over!"

"Hush!" said Mrs. Milburn over her shoulder. "The neighbors will hear you."

He came back into the hall and stood there, frowning, with his hands in his pockets. His handsome blood-shot eyes fixed themselves on a framed sampler that hung on the wall just behind Emmy.

It had been worked in cross-stitch by Grandmother Pentland long ago in her girlhood. It bore the date 1870 and this legend:

"East, west, Home is best."

Mr. Milburn turned his lanky gaze from it to his daughter Emmy. "Home," he quoted thickly. "Home is the place where, when you have to go, they have to take you in."

He started superiorly toward the stairs, then swayed blindly for an instant, reaching out for something to take hold of. Mrs. Milburn, coming in from the porch, seized him by the arm or he would have fallen. Supporting him with her small body, she led him toward the staircase.

"Dizzy, Rosy," he explained. "Stick-saw."

Emmy saw the look in her mother's eyes as she turned them upon him. Dismay and sorrow were in them—but love was in them, too. Love, that unbreakable thing.

"And no wonder you're sick, out on a night like this without an overcoat!" she said to him with a brusque tenderness. "I'm sure it's enough to give you your death of cold, Charlie Milburn!"

"Emmy," she called a moment later from the head of the stairs, "heat some water right away and bring it up in the jug for your father; he's very sick."

The jug was an ordinary stone vinegar jug. Filled with hot water and wrapped in an old towel, it had done service as a hot-water bottle in the Milburn family for many years.

Emmy stood beside the stove, looking at it, as she waited for the water to boil. She was doing some deep thinking.

"We haven't even enough money for a rubber water bottle," she said to herself, "and yet my father can ride around in taxicabs."

Her eyes went around the kitchen. They took in the candle burning on the shelf, the old-fashioned sad iron on the back of the cracked stove, the cheap tin dishpan hanging on the wall, the rag rugs on the well-scrubbed floor.

"Why, we haven't even the things that Mrs. Brainerd has!" she thought rebelliously. "Oilcloth and electric lights and such things! And mother and me wearing Maria's old clothes—Why is it?"

On the top of the newel post at the foot of the stairs lay the change from the fifty-dollar bill. Mrs. Milburn had flung it there in her haste when she helped her husband up the steps to his bedroom.

Emmy set the jug down on the floor without making a sound. She counted the money. It did not take her long to do it for there were just four ten-dollar bills folded together. Ten dollars! Ten dollars! Emmy closed her hand over the money and went on up to the second floor. Her mother was just coming out of the big front bedroom, her finger at her lips.

"Hush! He's sleeping!" she whispered as she took the jug. "Don't make a sound—and close the door of Dan's room, please."

Emmy opened her hand and held the four bills out to her on its palm. "Here's your change," she said with bitterness. "My father couldn't even bring you a birthday present, but he could spend Grandmother's on his taxicab. Ten dollars! He ought to be ashamed of himself. I heard what Grandmother said about him this afternoon. Don't think that I didn't."

Mrs. Milburn's face flushed. "Never let me hear you speak of your father that way again, Emmy."

"He works all day six days a week, and if he wants to come home in a cab on a bad night, I'm sure it's none of my affair. I have to wear out Marianna's old rags, either, I suppose." Emmy broke in passionately. "That I have to live in this dirty old coal-pit of a street! That we never go anywhere or have anything like nice people! All the rebellion and longing of youth were in her words. Bewildered, sensitive, youth that knows above all things to be "nice people"—to have nothing to be ashamed of—to be able to hold up its head with the crowd.

Mrs. Milburn's eyes took on that look of dismay and anxiety again. "We can't all of us be rich, Emmy. Somebody's got to be poor in this world, just to keep things balanced, I suppose," she said. "Be thankful that you've got your health and strength and a fair share of good looks."

The Theater

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 22.—Alberto Guglielmi, brother of the late Rudolph Valentino, finally has achieved his ambition in motion pictures. He will be seen in "Tropic Madness," an F. B. O. picture, starring Leatrice Joy, George Barud and Lena Malena.

Guglielmi's part hardly can be considered an important one but represents something to him which he has been trying continually to reach the screen for more than two years.

Incidentally Rudolph Valentino apparently was the first and the last great screen sheik. Thousands of sleek young men sought to be his successor and every studio in Hollywood at one time or another produced a "second Valentino." None of this crop of "second Valentinos" paid at the box office and the attempt to fill his place apparently has been abandoned.

Twenty Years '08- Ago -'28

The quiet little town of New Burlington was thrown into a tremor of excitement when it was learned that burglars had ransacked the post office and general store owned by Wayne C. Smith.

Legal Jr., local whirlwind pacer, owned by Ed Thornhill, strained a hind leg and is out of the racing game for the rest of the season.

A disastrous fire at the Zell book store on Green St. was narrowly averted by presence of mind of a customer.

Fire burned a dozen square feet of roof off the two-story frame dwelling on W. Second St., next to the railroad, occupied by Thomas J. Kelly.

Poems that Live

"WHEN I SAW YOU LAST, ROSE"

When I saw you last, Rose
You were only so high;
How fast the time goes!

Like a bud ere it blows,
You just peeped at the sky,
When I saw you last, Rose!

Now your petals uncloze,
Now your May-time is high;
How fast the time goes!

And a life—how it grows!
You were scarcely so shy,
When I saw you last, Rose!

In your bosom it shows
There's a guest on the sly;
(How fast the time goes!)

Is it Cupid? Who knows!
Yet you used not to sigh,
When I saw you last, Rose;
How fast the times goes!

County School News

BEAVER HIGH

Beavercreek Township High School takes great pleasure in introducing to the community two new teachers: Miss June Thompson of the English department, and Miss Elizabeth Nicholas, of the Home Economics department. Both of them are proving themselves quite capable in their respective departments, and they have shown great interest in all school activities organization.

Old Beaver started the year of 1928-29 on September 4, with an enrollment of 111 at the outset. Besides the two lady teachers who are new to the organization this year, we have with us from last year's faculty: Supt. A. C. Ewbanks, A. A. Neff, Smith-Hughes agricultural teacher; and Carl E. Smith, of the English and Latin departments.

PHYSICAL TRAINING

Shortly after the opening of the school semester, the groups for physical training at Beaver were definitely organized. For the girls, baseball and calisthenics are the main part of the program. The freshmen and sophomores, juniors and seniors alternate regularly under Miss Thompson and Miss Nicholas in their activities. Likewise, the boys meet at the same time with Mr. Smith or Mr. Neff for their activities, part of these being military drill, and part calisthenics, or an occasional game of ball or other contest.

BIOLOGY LAB.

As you look over the school campus, you can see pupils of the Biology Class out catching grasshoppers and honeybees. Along the creek banks they are catching frogs and crayfish. One of the members of the faculty has been kind enough to give the class one of his dogs for specimen. They also have a snake to work upon, donated to them by one of the seniors. Members of the class recently received their dissecting tools, and are ready for the "carving." If anyone has a specimen to give to the class, it will be gratefully received, as Miss Nicholas wishes them to collect and "pickle" a large and widely assorted lot of specimens now, while they may be secured and kept for later dissection. Bring them in.

CLASS NEWS

The second week of school found the freshmen dodging the upper classes, but the inevitable ways happens and every freshman had his turn at the old and honored (?) custom of "Initiation." The boys had their heads ducked in a nearby watering trough, while the girls were made to wear old and mismatched shoes. However, it hasn't seemed to injure them very seriously, for they have already rushed into organization and have elected a president, Paul Meyer. The other officers have not been elected yet.

The sophomores are contemplating a party of this coming Friday night. Details later.

The juniors are all well and happy. The girls have "done themselves proud" in playground baseball, while the boys are well represented in football.

The senior boys are up to the minute with "Dance Fashion." Don Sayrs says, "Suspenders are coming in again," and proves it by wearing them. The girls say, "If the boys wear suspenders, we are going to wear hair ribbons."

FOOTBALL

Beaver's football squad, under the skilled and efficient coaching of Supt. A. C. Ewbanks, is practicing daily for the first game, Friday, September 21, at Frankfort, Ohio. The boys are in good spirits, and are "all rarin' to go," so it looks like Beaver will have a very successful season. Quite a number of the past three years are still with us, along with others of slightly less experience, while several new but promising "green sticks of timber" are being worked out daily. Full lineup will be furnished in the next issue, along with details of the Frankfort game. Watch for our next issue.

BEAVER FALL FAIR

The Beaver annual Fall Fair will be held October 18-19. Details later. As the K. of P.'s have kindly granted permission to use the second floor also, for part of the exhibits, we shall have far better accommodations and twice the usual amount of room to accommodate our large audience, which always assembles for this event. Tell your friends and neighbors of the dates, and watch this paper for later announcements of this fair. A. A. Neff, of the agricultural department in charge.

WICHITA IS TAKING LEAD AS COUNTRY'S LEADING AIR CITY

WICHITA, Kan., Sept. 22.—If there is one city in the United States that takes its flying seriously it is Wichita.

The aeronautical industry has been developed here beyond any expectations. Commerce figures will manufacture approximately one third of the airplanes turned out in the United States this year. Six factories, one of them listed among the largest in the country, are busily turning out the latest model airplanes, unable to meet the demand despite improved production methods.

The six, in order to their size and output, are: Travel Air, 20 planes a week; Swallow Airplane company, seven; Cessna Aircraft company, three; Swift Airplane company, two planes produced to date with a projected production of one a week; and Laird Aircraft company, one every two weeks. The Wichita factories produce all types of planes, except the giant tri-motor. Luxurious cabin monoplanes and biplanes, swift little two-seaters, air mail raft—all are manufactured here.

Incidentally, Wichita boasts the oldest commercial airplane company, in the United States, the Swallow firm.

But the factories, important as they are, are only a part of the industry here. There are two motor companies; the Wichita Blue Streak Motor company, and the Quick Air Motors. The latter company has erected a factory, and production of five motors a day is scheduled. It will have an annual turnover of more than $4,000,000. A propeller company, transportation services, repair shop and flying schools also are centered here.

Wichita offers six landing fields: the municipal airport, the "California section," soon to be made the city's landing field, Cessna field,

Swift field, Swallow field, and Stearnman field.

A recent survey of the industry shows that today 841 men and women are employed in Wichita's airplane factories, as compared to only forty-two at the same time last year. That is exclusive of the numbers employed in other lines of the air business.

The Wichita Flying Club, the Wichita chapter of the National Aeronautic Association and the newly-organized Women's National

Aeronautic Association, have done much to bring this city to the front aeronautically, and have extensive plans for further development.

Another important phase of aeronautics in Wichita is the four-year intensive aeronautical course offered by the University of Wichita. Instructors are taken from the school's faculty, plane factories here, and from the army flying corps at Marshall Field, Fort Riley. The instruction offered covers every angle of the industry.
